AUSTRIA OPENS
RANK OF RULING
PARTY TO NAZISHitlerites Win Right to Fight for Power.

BY EDMOND TAYLOR.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

VIENNA, Feb. 18.—Austrians slept easily tonight for the first time since the interview in Berchtesgaden, Bavaria, last Saturday between Chancellor Kurt Schuschnigg of Austria and Reichsfuehrer Hitler of Germany. They were assured by a government statement that they are in no danger of waking up to find they are all Nazis—at least for a while.

This statement, the first detailed account of the historic meeting that the Austrian people have had, made it clear that the Nazis and monarchists will be allowed to fight it out inside Chancellor Schuschnigg's Fatherland Front, the only legal political party in Austria.

Foresee Propaganda Duel.

Thus, if the pledges which Hitler is alleged to have given are to be trusted, the ultimate fate of Austria will be decided by a propaganda duel between these rival forces, with Schuschnigg acting as umpire and the Fuehrer simply swinging the towel in his champion's corner.

The Austrian government's statement said the following points were agreed upon in Berchtesgaden:

FIRST—The German government agrees that no political activity may be carried out in Austria outside the Fatherland Front.

SECOND—The Austrian government agrees that the nationalist—meaning the Nazi—sentiment, as well as the monarchist sentiment, may be expressed within the framework of the Fatherland Front, in so far as they are compatible with the semi-Fascist Austrian constitution.

Hands Off! Nazis Told.

THIRD—The German government has issued orders to the party leaders in the Reich to abstain from interference in Austrian affairs.

FOURTH—The Austrian schilling (unit of currency) will not be aligned with the German mark, and there is no question of bringing Austria into the German four year plan for economic self-sufficiency, but efforts to increase economic exchanges with Germany will be continued.

Necessarily somewhat equivocal, like efforts to effect a compromise between white and black, this statement has, nonetheless, eased the extreme tension which prevailed here all week. Vienna now is waiting for the Fuehrer's speech to the German reichstag Sunday for further clarifications.

Celebrate Release of Nazis.

The reassuring effects produced by the statement were strengthened by celebrations in Vienna accompanying the release of 700 Nazi prisoners from the Vienna jail and Woelldorf concentration camp.

Several thousand Nazi supporters gathered to welcome them and later there was a ball in their honor. There was no disorder and on the whole the volume of enthusiasm displayed was not impressive.

However, the shadow of Nazism lies very heavy upon the land and no amount of reassuring statements will relieve the anxiety of thousands of Jews in Vienna, who fear they may be obliged to leave their homes.

BERLIN SCENTS MYSTERY

BY SIGMUND SCHULTZ.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, Feb. 18.—There was an element of mystery in the departure for Vienna tonight of Arthur Seyss-Inquart, Austria's new Nazi minister of interior. Two men, whose identity was not revealed, traveled on the train with him as he ended a two day visit to Reichsfuehrer Hitler and other Nazi leaders. One report said the men were German police experts. Seyss-Inquart, as minister of interior, will control the Austrian police. He conferred here yesterday with Heinrich Himmler, the head of all Germany's police.

Seyss-Inquart today attended the opening of the Nazi automobile show, where he witnessed the spellbinding technique of Hitler and Paul Joseph Goebbels, German minister of propaganda. Other activities of Seyss-Inquart during the days: He conferred with Rudolf Hess, Hitler's deputy leader of the Nazi party, who also is the leader of Germans living abroad; he conferred with Hartmann Lauterbacher, deputy Hitler youth

CHARGE MUDDLE
RESULTS FROM OFFICIAL LAXITYCounty Mess Worst
in U. S., Says Rees.

BY JOSEPH ATOR.

Cook county's tremendous load of delinquent real estate taxes, assessments, and penalties, now exceeding $280,000,000, is demoralizing the economic life of Chicago, John O. Rees, director of the committee on public expenditures, said yesterday. In a report on the tax situation he urged drastic foreclosure proceedings as the only feasible method of putting hundreds of thousands of delinquent properties back on a regular taxpaying basis. Of the present situation he said:

"Cook county leads all metropolitan communities in the amount of real estate tax delinquencies. The delinquency situation is so bad that there is no other metropolitan community with which it can be compared in this respect.

Charges inefficiency. "The situation reflects a condition of extreme inefficiency in the entire real estate tax collection procedure and machinery. Unfortunately, political leaders, public officials, newspapers, and the people generally have come to accept existing conditions as a matter of course when they are in fact demoralizing, injurious, and largely unnecessary."

Failure to collect real estate taxes, Mr. Rees said, has brought about the following situation:

1. Tax bills are at least 10 per cent higher than they would be if Chicago collected taxes as efficiently as other large cities.
2. Essential governmental services are being curtailed because of lack of tax revenue.
3. Since there is always the prospect that delinquent properties can be acquired through some tax compromise at prices far below present conceptions of value, there is no stable basis for real estate values in the county, either on delinquent or tax paid properties.
4. Delinquencies, because of their effect on property values, are a serious obstacle to investment of private capital in new building construction.

Total Unpaid 280 Millions.

Unpaid real estate taxes, on the basis from 1928 to 1936 inclusive, were 154 millions of dollars as of Jan. 1. Penalties of 60 millions more have accrued. In addition, there are 28 millions of unpaid special assessments in Chicago alone without considering penalties. If penalties and special assessments outside Chicago are included, the total special assessment load is probably between 50 and 60 millions, and the total liens on real estate in the county amount to 280 millions.

Information gathered from the land lot ledger system of keeping tax records, installation of which is being completed by County Auditor Leo Howard, indicates that approximately 40 per cent of the delinquent general tax bills are on about 6,000 properties which have annual bills exceeding $1,000.

An equal sum, it is estimated, is due on several hundreds of thousands of parcels of vacant real estate. It is this type of property which also carries the heaviest proportionate burden of unpaid special assessments.

The remaining 20 per cent of delinquent taxes, Mr. Rees estimates, is on improved properties with annual bills less than $1,000. These are, principally residences, flats, and apartment buildings.

Suggests New Record System.

He recommended that a record system similar to the land lot ledger be set up in the office of the county clerk for special assessment records. In the course of his investigation he sought to determine the amount of unpaid special assessments on a single lot, and had to consult 31 different tax record books.

As examples of the success of large income producing properties in avoiding tax payments, Mr. Rees gave detailed records since the 1928 tax levy of seven properties which for 1936 had a total assessed value of $3,272,050, equal to a full valuation of $5,634,533.

Not one of these properties has made sufficient tax payments to counterbalance mounting penalties on the unpaid balance. On last Jan. 1 the group owed 112 per cent of the

THE FOLLY OF ALLOWING OURSELVES
TO BE BOUND HAND AND FOOTInsane Chicago
Hammer Killer
Is Recaptured

Chester, Ill., Feb. 18.—(AP)—Suffering from exposure, Paul Harrison and Peter Florek, escaped criminals, insane patients from the Illinois Security hospital at Menard, were captured without resistance late today in an old warehouse on Chester's Mississippi river waterfront. The building is less than a mile from the hospital.

The fugitives had hidden in the warehouse, most of the time without food, since Saturday night, when they attempted to swim the Mississippi river after fleeing from the hospital.

Glad They Are Discovered.

"I'm glad you found us," Harrison told Night Marshal Guy E. Ridgion and James Hanson, a Chester newspaper man, who had accompanied the officer.

Both feet frozen, Harrison, 35 year old hammer slayer of four persons in Chicago in 1931 and 1932, had to be carried from the building. At the hospital, Dr. James McManus, the superintendent, said he was "in bad shape and in danger of pneumonia."

An iron spike, part of a pile pole, used by river boats to fend off logs and driftwood, led to the capture of the men.

Finding the spike, Ridgion and Hanson searched the levee district and discovered the handle on the lower floor of the old warehouse. Going to the second floor, their searchlights directed them to a pile of lumber and boxes in a far corner. They noticed footprints in the dust. Searching, they found the two men in a large box, one end of which was open.

Give Up Without Fight.

Ridgion drew a gun, but there was no resistance, although Florek submitted sullenly. One of his feet was frozen and he had to be assisted from the building.

The men escaped from the hospital by using keys, made from shoe arch supports, to open two seldom used steel doors. Harrison said they went to the river with the intention of swimming to the Mississippi shore. Florek's strength failed him, however, and they finally came ashore in front of the warehouse, about a half mile downstream from the hospital. They had nothing to eat until Tuesday night when Florek left the warehouse and begged food from a woman. Last night Florek, who had been sentenced for burglary, slipped out and broke into a water front store and took meat and milk.

A TROLLEY CAR GETS
LOST IN THE TRACKED
WILDS OF BALTIMORE

Baltimore, Md., Feb. 18.—(AP)—A Baltimore trolley car got lost in the tracked wilds of the city today, rumbling about unfamiliar streets with 25 good natured passengers for more than an hour before the motorman found his way back to his route—two blocks from where he started. A four-alarm fire in a furniture store made necessary rerouting of the car and resulted in the bewildering ride.

MARY PICKFORD
VISITS CRADLE—
JUST TO LOOK?

Of course, there may not be a thing to it. And we'd be the very last ones to want to start rumors. But Mary Pickford paid a visit yesterday to the Cradle, in Evanston. The Cradle is where you go when you want to adopt a baby. It must be admitted that some people do go there just to look, the Cradle being an institution well worth seeing.

The people at the Cradle wouldn't say why Mary Pickford was there, and her husband, Charles (Buddy) Rogers, the band leader, said she must have gone there just to look. As a matter of fact, he added, warming up, any other idea would be ridiculous. The Rogerses will start on a South American cruise when Buddy's band concludes its engagement at a loop hotel on Feb. 24.

Mrs. Narrod Hires New Maid and Does She Clean House

The new colored maid had the best of references and Mrs. Clara Narrod, 425 Surf street, thought she was nice looking. The maid, who said her name was Elizabeth Clark, appeared to like the Narrod apartment. "I'd like to clean up here," she said. An hour later Mrs. Narrod was telling the Sheffield avenue police that Elizabeth had cleaned up $5,000 worth of jewelry, clothing, and securities and had disappeared.

Since then Zion (pop. 6,000) has had no drug store. Voliva prefers prayers to medicine. Yesterday, however, William J. Bicket announced that he will open a Zion drug store Monday.

Keno Players
Have Fun and Help 'Charity'

Keno, that intriguing promise of easy money, is played twice weekly by several hundred enthusiasts in the Del Prado hotel, 5307 Hyde Park boulevard, always with the assurance that a portion of the proceeds goes to a worthy charity. Wednesday night it was announced that St. Xavier's academy, 4928 Cottage Grove avenue, would benefit from each pot collected. Last night, Sister Superior Genevieve, head of the Catholic girls' school, declared the academy had had nothing to do with the game, did not know it had been chosen as the recipient charity, and had not received one cent.

$40 Promised to Academy.

"They shouldn't use our name," the sister added, "and I think it should be investigated. St. Xavier's academy has never sponsored a keno game. Some one called us today and said that we were to have gotten $40 from the game. That would mean nothing at all to us."

Even if a charity receives some of the take-off, the game of keno when played for money is illegal, Police Commissioner Allman said.

"No matter where it is played it is illegal," he declared. "The police department has instructions to stop every game that comes to its attention. Any one who knows of the existence of such a gambling game should communicate either with my office or with a district police commander."

Always Glad to Cooperate.

Attendants at the Del Prado game, which overflooded from the hotel dining room into the ballroom with a crowd estimated at about 700, pointed out a baldish, well dressed man as the operator. They identified him as Jeff Rosenzweig. Mr. Rosenzweig was approached.

"How do you select your charity?" he was asked.

"They select us," Rosenzweig replied, with an insinuating smile. "We are besieged with requests. We are glad to cooperate if it is for a worthy cause, but we always investigate first."

Three series of keno games were played during the evening at $1 per card per series. Onlookers calculated the total night's take at a minimum of $2,000.

Grain Gambler
Tells of Losing
Clients' Funds

Fred F. Pepperdine, a dignified, middle aged man of military bearing, strode briskly into the downtown offices of the state's attorney's blue sky division, introduced himself to Assistant State's Attorney John J. Phillips, and asked:

"Have you any complaints against me?"

Somewhat surprised, Phillips hurriedly searched his mind for recollection of complaints against some one of Pepperdine's name, then replied:

"No, not a one."

"Well, there will be," said Pepperdine positively. "I've taken $75,000 of my clients' money, and they have nothing to show for it."

Prediction Comes True.

This strange visit was made two days ago. Yesterday Pepperdine's prediction about complaints was fulfilled. Several were received, and police, on orders of Phillips and Eugene O'Connor, chief blue sky investigator, raided his one-man office at 120 South La Salle street and confiscated his records. He was ordered held for a grand jury hearing on Wednesday.

Pepperdine is 56 years old and lives at 6104 Glenwood avenue. He said he served as a United States army captain in the Boxer rebellion and Philippine insurrection. Until 1933 he was a licensed broker.

Some time ago he invented a "sure fire" system for predicting market trends and making money on grain futures. It was on this very system, he admitted to Phillips, that he lost the $75,000. But, he quickly added, it wasn't the system's fault. It was his. "I played it wrong," he explained.

Pressman Drops $5,000.

Twenty-eight victims were on Pepperdine's list. One of the heaviest losers was Louis McFerran, 34 years old, a printing pressman of Mount Morris, Ill., who heard through a Freeport friend that Pepperdine had a system for beating the market. McFerran invested $5,000.

"I met Mr. Pepperdine," said Mr. McFerran in Mount Morris last night, "and found him the cold, impersonal type I always had conceived market traders to be. He wouldn't say what his unbreakable system was, but I suspect it was based on charts and also on 'h's and 's' quotes. He told me he wouldn't fool around with the usual La Salle street systems, such as cycles and so on. 'They just don't work,' he said. Mine will, and I wouldn't sell it for less than $100,000."

Mr. McFerran believed in Pepperdine, especially when he received a statement that his profits had risen $9,000, for a total account of $14,000. But a few weeks ago Mr. McFerran decided he wanted his $5,000 original investment back. Pepperdine held off. He also made excuses to other investors. The reason was elemental. Against his admitted losses of $75,000, investigators last night were able to uncover assets of only $135 in cash and $500 in securities—and the securities weren't his.

EAST AND WEST MEET AND UNITE; THAT'S MANILA

It's a Modern City, with Horses and Buggies.

BY CAPT. M. M. CORPENING.
(Chicago Tribune Press Service.)
MANILA, P. I.—(By Air Mail.)—
Manila, which gets its name from Manila, about which Capt. Corpening writes, indicated by arrow.

With a population of 350,000, Manila embodies a combination of eastern and western civilizations. Founded in the 16th century, it is rich in points of historical interest. Chief among these is the world famous walled city.

Wall 15 Feet High.
When the Spaniards established Manila they immediately prepared for defense by constructing a great stone wall with an average height of fifteen feet and four feet thick surrounding the town. In length the walled city is less than a mile, in width about one-half mile.

In the old days a large moat surrounded the wall, but that has given way to golf courses, parks, and the business district of the present Manila. Within the walled city are churches, convents, prisons, barracks and living quarters.

Fort Santiago, said to be the oldest fort flying the American flag, stands in the northwest corner. It is now the headquarters of the United States army in the Philippines. The old prison and barracks have been converted into officers' quarters.

Old Mingies with New.
The churches and archways are masterpieces of old Spanish architecture. Pointed out to visitors is the cell in which José Rizal, great Philippine leader of the late 19th century, occupied his last night before the Spaniards shot him in the back.

From the historic walled city has grown modern Manila, new in some aspects, old in others. There are no blocks, as in American cities, and streets are narrow and rough. One finds in the center of the business section automobiles of all makes and ages, bicycle riders, horse carts, horse buses, street cars, and carabao (water buffalo) wagons.

Asked if there are any traffic regulations, the cab driver replies that automobiles are supposed to pass other vehicles on the left side. Two collisions of horse carts with automobiles and one of two automobiles were seen in an hour's drive. The horse carts, which are called carromats (2 to 4 passengers), and carrettes (2 to 6 passengers), are two wheeled vehicles without brakes. The little ponies, about 12 hands, are not heavy enough to handle their burdens with sufficient precision to cope with

Mores Noted as Warriors.
The Philippine Islands, located in the Pacific ocean, 7,000 miles southwest of San Francisco, have a total area of 115,000 square miles and a population of 15,000,000. Of this number 200,000 are Chinese, 15,000 Japanese, 10,000 Americans, Spaniards, and other nationalities. Of the natives 500,000 are Mohammedans, or the so-called Moros, who have gained fame as warriors. Despite this reputation, the Filipinos are a peace loving, industrious agricultural people. In trips about Manila not a bar-room is seen except those in the hotels, which are patronized by Americans.

In contour the island group is long and narrow, extending north and south. The islands are many in number (7,083), but only twelve are of importance. Luzon is the major island. The capital and largest city, Manila, is here. World trade radiates from the base.

Climate Is Tropical.
The terrain of the islands is mostly flat, with a mountain chain extending down the center from end to end with elevations up to 10,000 feet. Peaks of 5,000 feet are common.

The climate is tropical the year round—hotter, of course, in the summer. Asked about the date of an event, an old timer said he would have to go to the records. He explained that having no seasons made it difficult to differentiate one period from another. The milestones of time are not registered by seasons. The people play football and baseball the year round. College commence-

Horse Cabs Snarl Manila Traffic

A carromata, with a capacity of two to four passengers, one of the two types of pony drawn vehicles which give trouble to drivers of 20,000 autos in capital of the Philippines.

The Filipinos' idea of driving an automobile. At first glance, the visitor thinks pony drivers are subjects for the humane society, but closer observation mellowes this impression. Continuous pulling on lines with one hand and whipping with the other seems to be a nervous habit with the drivers and understood by the horses. Bits are mild and whips short. The ponies apparently understand and are not bothered.

It is a unique sight to see many automobiles in a traffic line headed by a cart drawn by two water buffaloes in tandem. Police do the best they can, but narrow streets irregularly laid out, 20,000 automobiles, and 6,000 horses are too much for them.

One wonders as he passes the Philippine General hospital, one of the largest in the orient, how many of the 600 beds are occupied by traffic victims.

Outside the limits of the city proper is New Manila, a suburb being built up mostly by foreigners with means. Houses are nondescript in architecture and size. More attention seems to be paid to grounds and shrubbery than to buildings.

Flowers on All Sides.
One of the main streets has trees on each side protected by concrete bases 8 feet square and 2 feet high. Flowers are everywhere. Hibiscus, bougainvillea, cana lilies, orchids, and palms of all species are plentiful. Schools and industrial plants are scarce, but churches are numerous.

Returning to town, road space is given to a Chinese funeral. The leading car, open and filled with flowers, has a large picture (about 3x4 feet) placed upright on the back seat. Next is a truck carrying a band, then a truck float decorated with Chinese colors, then another band, a float, a band, a float, then a four horse hearse. The horses pulling the hearse are decorated with plumes and drapes and led by Chinese boys in livery. The family of the deceased and friends follow in automobiles. The deceased evidently was of importance.

Aside from sunsets and historic landmarks, Manila is noted chiefly for cigars, embroideries, wood carvings, and old Spanish furniture. The city is flat and compact, with the Pasig river running through the center of it.

Mores Noted as Warriors.
The Philippine Islands, located in the Pacific ocean, 7,000 miles southwest of San Francisco, have a total area of 115,000 square miles and a population of 15,000,000. Of this number 200,000 are Chinese, 15,000 Japanese, 10,000 Americans, Spaniards, and other nationalities. Of the natives 500,000 are Mohammedans, or the so-called Moros, who have gained fame as warriors. Despite this reputation, the Filipinos are a peace loving, industrious agricultural people. In trips about Manila not a bar-room is seen except those in the hotels, which are patronized by Americans.

In contour the island group is long and narrow, extending north and south. The islands are many in number (7,083), but only twelve are of importance. Luzon is the major island. The capital and largest city, Manila, is here. World trade radiates from the base.

Climate Is Tropical.
The terrain of the islands is mostly flat, with a mountain chain extending down the center from end to end with elevations up to 10,000 feet. Peaks of 5,000 feet are common.

The climate is tropical the year round—hotter, of course, in the summer. Asked about the date of an event, an old timer said he would have to go to the records. He explained that having no seasons made it difficult to differentiate one period from another. The milestones of time are not registered by seasons. The people play football and baseball the year round. College commence-tribes, cliques and clans) uses flowers for a calendar in keeping up with the months. While the population is large for the area and some districts are crowded, the saturation point is not in sight.

Gold mining is the principal industry in the Philippines. Although the metal was discovered here years ago, it was not until 1933, when the value of the metal was raised, that the industry flourished. The army of occupation that followed Dewey's victory had many prospectors in its ranks, but no capital to support them. The low price of gold early in the century served to prevent outside capital from coming in.

Output Equals that of Alaska.
Since 1933 the industry has gone forward by leaps and bounds, and from all indications will continue to do so. At the present time the output is about on a par with Alaska. There is plenty of capital here now and new machinery and new mines coming in. More about gold in another article.

Fishing is an important food producing source. From the air thousands of fish traps are observed along the Pasig river and around Manila bay. They are made by supporting nets on anchored posts. In design they resemble large v's, with legs at an angle of thirty degrees and about 100 feet long. At the point is the catch basin.

In addition to fish the Pasig river presents many interesting sights on its surface. Gaudily painted "casco" (river barges), coconut rafts and a motley crew of small craft fight their way up and down—all powered by paddle and pole. On some of the larger boats families live for generations, coming ashore only on business or to bury their dead.

The predominant religion is Roman Catholic. Favorite pastimes of the natives are dancing and cock fighting.

SPANISH REBELS MAKE NEW GAINS NORTH OF TERUEL

HENDAYE, France [at the Spanish Frontier], Feb. 18.—(AP)—Insurgents reported today's surprise counter-offensive had forced 40,000 government troops to fall back from the mountain positions northeast of Teruel where they had been massed for an attack. Reports placed government losses in the last two days of fighting in the thousands, including many North American members of the government international brigades.

Planes Attack French Destroyer.
PERPIGNAN, France, Feb. 18.—(AP)—Spanish war planes attempted to bomb the French destroyer La Cordere twice today off Cerbere, but failed to hit her. The ship, it was learned, was attacked the first time by government planes eight miles off the coast. The planes apparently mistook the destroyer for one of the insurgent ships which shelled the coast off northeast Spain earlier in the day.

The second attack came while the destroyer was in French territorial waters, returning to her base at Port Vendres. The attacking planes flew at a high altitude and their identity was not determined.

WOMAN KILLED WHEN CAR LEAPS CURB AND UPSETS

Auto Hurtles Onto Walk After Collision.

A woman pedestrian was killed at Washington boulevard and Francisco avenue last night when an automobile ran onto the sidewalk after it had been struck by another car and overturned upon her. The victim was Miss Jean Nelson, 50 years old, 2914 Washington boulevard.

She was standing on the southwest corner waiting to cross the boulevard. A westbound car approached. It was driven by Paul J. Ballard, 45 years old, 630 North Humphrey avenue, Oak Park, a retired United States naval wireless operator. With him was his wife, Mary, 40 years old.

Forced to Sidewalk. As Ballard reached the intersection a southbound car, driven by Mark Bright, 37 years old, 265 North Sacramento boulevard, a boilermaker, shot through the boulevard and struck his machine, sending it diagonally across the pavement and upon the curb where it upset on Miss Nelson.

She was dead when taken to Washington boulevard hospital by Mark Soper, 640 South Cuyler avenue, Oak Park, another motorist. Mrs. Ballard, who was slightly hurt, was also taken to the hospital. Both drivers were held.

Joseph Sadelski, a farmer near Gurnee, in Lake county, escaped injury yesterday when a Skokie Valley train wrecked his truck at 13th street in North Chicago. The train was damaged and delayed for thirty minutes before it could proceed.

Pedestrian Killed. Lee Burke, 1403 Howard street, a barber, died yesterday in St. Francis hospital, Evanston, of injuries suffered when he was struck by an automobile at Howard street and Greenview avenue Thursday night. Rolf Bremer, 7542 Eastlake terrace, was driving the car.

Up to 4 p. m. yesterday 143 persons had been killed by automobiles in Cook county since Jan. 1. Of these 118 were killed in Chicago, where 2,290 were injured in the same period.

New York, Feb. 18.—(AP)—Frances Farmer, film actress, currently appearing on the Broadway stage, was not in a photograph of a group of movie players introduced in the recent Paul A. Wright murder trial at Los Angeles, Paramount Pictures, Inc., announced.

"We checked into the matter with Miss Frances Farmer, who is under contract to Paramount Pictures, Inc.," said a Paramount representative, "and she emphatically stated that she did not attend the cocktail party referred to in the reproduced photograph. Miss Farmer's picture or likeness was not, in fact, any of those included in the above mentioned photograph."

Paramount's representative referred to a photograph of Wright surrounded by members of the movie colony taken in 1936 at a cocktail lounge of an airport with which Wright formerly was connected, and which was introduced at the trial.

Miss Farmer's name was among those written on the back of the photograph, and attorneys read into the record each name and questioned Wright concerning his acquaintance with the persons designated. Wright testified the photograph was taken for airport publicity purposes and that he had not seen before or since most of the persons in the group.

POLICE OFFICERS ARE INDICTED ON BOMBING CHARGE

Los Angeles, Cal., Feb. 18.—(AP)—Three suspended police officers, Capt. Earle E. Kynette, Roy J. Allen, and F. A. Browne, were indicted late today on charges of conspiracy to murder Harry Raymond, private detective. The indictments were returned by the county grand jury after studying files of the police intelligence squad, which was headed by Kynette.

Raymond was seriously injured by a bomb which exploded when he stepped on the starter of his automobile.

The three indicted men were booked in the county jail and on recommendation of the jury were refused bail.

Woman Robbed of Purse as She Prays at Novena

Miss Hazel Keane, 5832 North avenue, reported to Warren avenue police last night that her purse, containing $70 and three rings valued at $525, was stolen from her while she was attending novena services in Our Lady of Sorrows Catholic church, 3121 Jackson boulevard. She was praying at the time and did not immediately discover the theft.

TORNADO'S DEATH TOLL REACHES 25; MANY HOMELESS

Rodessa, La., Feb. 18.—(Special.)—The death toll stood at twenty-five tonight as the result of a tornado which ripped through this northwest Louisiana oil town last night, splintering scores of homes and business houses.

As volunteer and relief workers searched the debris along the town's main street, a checkup revealed forty-one other persons injured and one missing. Many more were homeless. Torrential rains following the tornado made the entire area a foot deep mud puddle. Wreckage was strewn along a path 200 yards wide and a mile and a half long.

BACK TAX MUDDLE IN COUNTY LAID TO OFFICIAL LAXITY

taxes originally extended against them.

"Thousands of these [6,000] properties are involved in various sorts of proceedings in the jurisdiction of state and federal courts," Mr. Rees said. "In view of the supposed fact that taxes are a first lien on these properties, and should be paid ahead of secondary liens, the record would seem to indicate a high degree of official indifference to the effective protection and enforcement of the tax liens."

More accrual of penalties, Mr. Rees said, has obviously been insufficient to force payment of taxes. Tax sales and tax receiverships cannot be effectively used against such a great mass of properties as are now delinquent. Therefore he recommended passage by the legislature of a new tax foreclosure law, under which delinquent properties would be sold and a clear title given as is now possible upon foreclosure of a mortgage.

M'NUTT DELAYS FLORIDA TRAIN FOR HALF HOUR

The Florida Special of the Pennsylvania railroad set in the Union station, thirty minutes after its scheduled time of departure last night to wait for Paul V. On arriving in the station he jovially greeted a delegation of political friends from Indiana while his luggage was moved from one special car to another.

The former Indiana governor declined to discuss politics, but declared he is heartily in favor of the navy extension program. He will remain in this country until April 1, visiting in Indianapolis and then going to Washington for a conference with President Roosevelt.

How Tax Payments Are Avoided

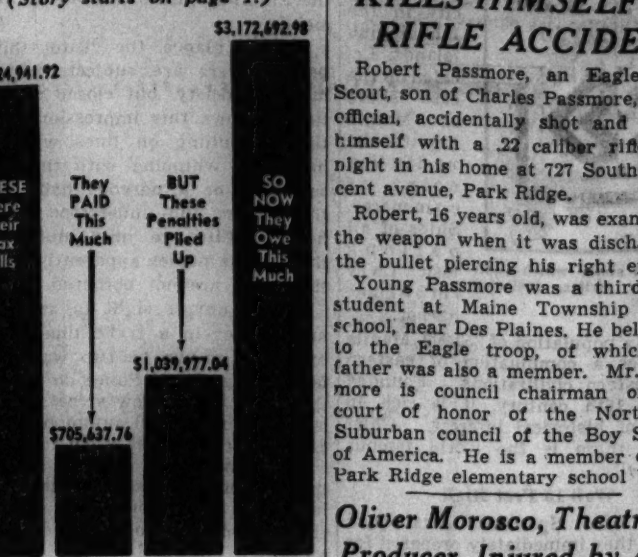

Illustrating the facility with which large income producing properties have avoided tax payments, John O. Rees, director of the committee on public expenditures, yesterday cited the tax paying record of a south side apartment hotel back to July 1, 1930, the date on which its 1928 tax bill was due. The building recently came out of a receivership under which disbursement of its income was subject to court order and also (presumably) subject to the legal rule that taxes are a prior lien to all other claims. The 1936 assessed valuation of the property was $160,169, based on a full value of $432,456.

Richard Peabody, 25 years old, 1423 Berteau avenue, one of three men on trial in the Criminal court for the murder of Miss Jean Riley, 26 years old, a movie house cashier, yesterday pleaded guilty before Judge John C. The jury was not informed of the plea, however, and prosecution continued against the other defendants, Alfred Davies, 25, of 1349 North Bell avenue, and Arthur La Frana, 24, of 2621 Cortland street. Judge Lewis set Feb. 23 as the date for sentencing Peabody.

SU-LIN GREETSS SISTER WITH A POKE ON NOSE

Then 2 Pandas Kiss and Make Up at Zoo.

BY VIRGINIA GARDNER.

Mel-Mel, the second giant panda ever brought to a zoo, delighted a gaping and excited throng on her arrival yesterday, but got a cool and casual reception from Su-Lin, the original giant panda, when they met at the Chicago Zoological park in Brookfield.

At first ignoring the baby held out for her approval in the arms of her captor, Mrs. William H. Harkness Jr., Su-Lin continued to turn somersaults.

"Look at your baby sister, you mutt," fondly admonished Edward H. Bear, director of the zoo, as he interrupted Su-Lin's play to bring her to her diminutive double.

Mel-Mel (the name means Little Sister in Chinese) put back her ears and glared angrily from beady black eyes at the older panda. Su-Lin gazed back calmly, then lifted a paw and casually biffed Mel-Mel across the nose.

Swats Keeper for Luck.

Sam Parratt, Su-Lin's devoted keeper, anxiously intervened. He got a real swipe on the nose. Mrs. Harkness, clutching the woolly, wriggling Mel-Mel as hundreds of Brookfield school children screamed and laughed, brought out a handkerchief with her other hand and dabbed at the blood on the keeper's face.

"Su-Lin thinks Mel-Mel's only a toy panda," surmised Robert Bean, assistant director. "She's seen lots of 'em."

While Mrs. Harkness, panting and worn, rested a minute, Mel-Mel was allowed to occupy Su-Lin's beloved chair in the inclosed yard of the panda house. Su-Lin, now a great creature weighing 126 pounds, lunged forward to remove the little one. She was held back and shortly afterward decided peace was the best policy. She turned a bored cheek and let Mel-Mel gingerly kiss her. They will not be permitted in the same inclosure for six months or a year, depending on how rapidly Mel-Mel grows. For a few days the new baby will occupy a play pen in the first aid station and rest from her journey, if her buoyant, hoydenish temperament allows for rest.

Purchase Before Board.

Mel-Mel (the latest on the pronouncement of Mrs. Harkness, who captured both giant pandas in the wilds of the Chinese-Tibetan border, until the animal committee and executive board of the Chicago Zoological society decide whether the society will buy her.

The society ordered a male giant panda. It was Mrs. Harkness' intention to get a male when she started on her second panda hunt, financed from the $8,500 she obtained from the society for Su-Lin.

Mrs. Harkness and Mel-Mel, after a 15,000 mile journey by carrier-chair, rickshaw, bamboo raft, ship, TWA plane, and train, arrived in the morning on the California Limited in Dearborn street station. Waiting were a delegation of dignitaries, radio workers, numerous uniformed policemen, and newspaper and news reel cameramen.

Mrs. Harkness, the first person to succeed in bringing a giant panda to any zoo, planted a kiss on the ruddy cheek of Edward H. Bear, zoo director, and tried to hold Mel-Mel, a microphone or two and some flowers. Clayton F. Smith, president of the board of county commissioners, made a speech for the benefit of radio listeners.

Mel-Mel Plays Rough.

In the midst of the goings-on, Mrs. Harkness precipitously left the observation platform and retired to her drawing room. Mel-Mel had given her a vicious swipe and bitten her cheek.

"She's just precocious," Mrs. Harkness said fondly. "She's a panda prodigy. Su-Lin did scratch me up when I brought her back, but she was gentle and demure compared to this little hoyden. I'm a mass of bruises and scratches." Mel-Mel finally indicated she was ready to go to Brookfield.

Mel-Mel was captured by native hunters, of whom Mrs. Harkness employed as many as 150 at times during her stay of three months in the wilderness of western China. Dogs frightened the panda's mother from their nest in a cave.

Explains Her Success.

Mrs. Harkness was asked how she could capture two pandas in two trips into the interior when many explorers had failed, including her husband, a seasoned hunter who died in China before his dream of capturing a giant panda was realized. Mrs. Harkness said: "I'm part Indian—one thirty-second American Indian. So I'm kin to the Mongolians, and I love and understand the Chinese. That's why I can get pandas."

PUT SUIT AGAINST MACFADDEN INTO HANDS OF JURORS

New York, Feb. 18.—[Special.]—A Danvers, Mass., cafeteria manager's $100,000 allegation of affections suit against Bernard Macfadden, 69 years old, physical culture exponent and publisher, went to a mixed Supreme court jury tonight. If reached, the verdict will be sealed and presented Monday.

Principal testimony was a deposition by the plaintiff's wife, Mrs. Sorita C. Adams, 45 years old, of Joplin, Mo., a masseuse, describing alleged intimacies with Macfadden.

Adams told of wooing his future wife at a Battle Creek, Mich., health resort and installing her as cashier in his cafeteria, saying she had a very warm regard for him until she met Macfadden, after which her feelings grew colder. Macfadden, the last witness, denied all the deposition allegations. He never, he said, supported Mrs. Adams, kissed her, or held her on his lap.

OLD TELEGRAM RUSE GETS A HUSBAND INTO PAYING SOME ALIMONY

When Lee Smithpeters succeeded in avoiding deputy sheriffs, Attorney Samuel M. Starr told Judge John J. Lupe yesterday, the lawyer resorted to an old ruse. The attorney sent a telegraph messenger boy to the wholesale grocery warehouse at 8100 Vincennes avenue where Smithpeters worked.

Smithpeters thought it was a telegram, but the boy handed him a notice to appear in court yesterday and explain why he had not paid $194 to his estranged wife, Bernice, of 6442 Yale avenue. Censured by the court for not supporting his wife and daughter, Dixie, 2 years old, Smithpeters paid $22 and promised to pay more later.

CHANDLER SINGS FOR VOTES AND BARKLEY'S SEAT

Governor of Kentucky
Defies Olympus.

BY PHILIP KINSLEY.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]
Frankfort, Ky., Feb. 18.—[Special.]—Gov. Albert Benjamin [Happy] Chandler of Kentucky, has become a national political figure overnight by his bold challenge of the Roosevelt administration in this state. He is seeking the overthrow of the powerful majority leader in the United States senate, Alben W. Barkley of Paducah.

The effects of his action will extend far beyond the blue grass borders and will accentuate and accelerate the split in the Democratic party that will be reflected in the 1938 and 1940 elections.

Gov. Chandler intimated today that Postmaster General Jim Farley might be on his side in the new alignment within the party which he foresees throughout the nation. He also discussed his recent visit to Washington, at the request of the President, and something of the broad outlines of the campaign which he will open officially next week to become the Democratic senatorial nominee in the August primary election. If he is nominated it probably will be equivalent to election, as he anticipates much Republican support, "from those who think as I do."

A picture of the genial boss of the New Deal machine, Farley, adorns the governor's office. It came in recently, since the governor's pilgrimage to the mountain top at the White House, where he was shown a wide domain of money and power if he would be a good boy and go along with the Barkley nomination. Farley's scrawl, addressing the governor and calling himself "a real friend," is on the picture. The President's picture is also over the governor's desk, but of this he says:

"I think we have him beaten in this state. He told me that he had sent 134 millions into this state. He called this a lot of money and intimated by insinuating that there was more to come. I told him I didn't want it, that if I needed money I would ask my own people for it. We have nothing to show for the 134 millions anyway except two keynote speeches. It is pitiful. Even relief has been on a political basis."

Wants Balanced Budget.

"My emphasis has been and will be on a balanced budget. When the President mentioned the 134 millions, as if we should be grateful for it, I mentioned to him that on the basis of Kentucky's tax payments we owed two billions of the national debt and this left us one billion and 800 million or so in debt. He did not like that."

For his own budget the governor is credited with lowering the state debt from 26 millions to 11 millions and reducing interest more than a million a year.

"We make out a budget and then the departments stick to it," he said. "We have actually underspent by about two millions this last year. I do not permit the department heads to come around begging and lobbying for more money as they do in Washington."

Ready for Campaign.

Other people have opposed Roosevelt and the administration on this basis and have not gone far. It is a mighty thing to oppose, Chandler admits, when federal organization and the President's popularity are combined, as they will be in this fight against the happy governor.

"I had no chance when I was elected," he says. "Now I have a good chance." He brings to this struggle not only a neat state organization which he controls in somewhat dictatorial fashion, with a smile but a determined purpose behind it, but a unique personality and a method of campaigning which is reminiscent of the late Huey Long.

"Chandler has the Huey Long methods but Calvin Coolidge results," said a Kentucky political writer.

Chandler, in other words, pulls no share the wealth rabbits out of his

INDEPENDENT RACE FOR MUNICIPAL COURT IS PLANNED BY LYLE

Former Municipal Judge John H. Lyle, who was denied a place on the Municipal court slate for the April primaries by the Republican county central committee, announced yesterday he would run independently for one of the twelve nominations.

In making known this plan, Lyle laid the blame for his failure to be slated to Henry A. Gardner of Winnetka, Republican committee member from New Trier township, whom Lyle characterized as dictating the Chicago judicial slate, although living outside the city limits. Gardner is a former president of the Chicago Bar association which criticized Lyle several years ago for placing excessive bonds on criminals brought before him.

hat, but underneath an appealing and entertaining show surface presents a conservative, commonsense approach to fiscal and constructive problems.

How He Campaigns.

Gov. Chandler's progress through the legislative halls gives an indication of his campaigning methods. He is a sturdy, quick-stepping figure, "strong as a bull," he says. He has a word and a smile for everybody, calling most people by their first name.

It is when he is in an entertaining mood that he is at his best. He cannot only talk but sing. His voice is a mellow, somewhat husky baritone with a tear in it. The other day he sang for the legislators, once in the house and again at the invitation of the senate. He had with him a boy from the country, Ed Brashers of Dawson Springs, who sings a wicked guitar and a croon that has tears in it.

This is the sort of a boy the governor is interested in, as he came from a small town and sold newspapers and worked his own way up all along the way through college. The red headed boy and the governor, with heads close and the governor's arm around the boy's shoulders, sang "Home on the Range" with telling effect.

Born in Small Town.

The governor's home is in Versailles, a small town near Lexington, where he practiced law before entering politics. He was born in Corydon, in the western part of the state. After high school he worked his way through Transylvania college in Lexington, oldest college west of the Alleghenies, where Jefferson Davis went to school while his father was carving out a plantation along the Mississippi river wilderness.

After graduation in 1921 Chandler went to Harvard law school. He is 39 years old and has degrees from Transylvania and from the University of Kentucky. He is a Mason, a Shriner, member of the Episcopal church, and the American Legion.

SENATOR SHOULD BE DOWNSTATER, ASSERTS LUCAS

Tradition Calls for It, Says Aspirant.

Springfield, Ill., Feb. 18.—[Special.]—With Gov. Horner at his side, Congressman Scott W. Lucas of Havana, who has the support of the governor's organization for the Democratic nomination for United States senator, this afternoon declared that the senatorship rightfully belongs to a downstate man.

Lucas' statement was made at a press conference in Gov. Horner's statehouse office, attended also by Speaker Louie E. Lewis of Christendom, the Horner organization candidate for state treasurer.

"The main issue at this time is that by all the rules of the game downstate Illinois is entitled to a senator," said Lucas. "It has been tradition for one senator to come from Chicago and one from downstate."

Speech to Open Campaign.

Congressman Lucas said he would clear up his stand on national issues in his address Thursday night at Decatur, at the official opening of the campaign fight.

Asked if he had heard statements by opposition forces that he had failed to support President Roosevelt as wholeheartedly as Senator William H. Dieterich, Lucas said: "I call your attention to our records."

Speaker Lewis issued a statement to quiet reports that he will withdraw from the race for state treasurer from the 25th district or for reelection to the state legislature.

Asked about a rumor that his faction would support Leo B. Walsh of Toluca for superintendent of public instruction against the incumbent, John A. Wieland of Calumet, Gov. Horner replied that to his knowledge the committee representing his downstate supporters had made no selection.

Tour to Start Friday.

The governor also said that the decision of whether his Chicago supporters would support a candidate for sheriff in Cook county in opposition to Thomas J. O'Brien is entirely in the hands of the Chicago committee.

Congressman Lucas, accompanied by Thomas L. O'Brien of Peoria, the Horner candidate for congressman-at-large, will begin a tour of the state Friday morning.

A second caravan will be headed by Speaker Lewis, and will include Senator T. V. Smith of Chicago, the candidate for congressman at large, and Adam Bloch, also of Chicago, candidate for clerk of the Supreme court on the Horner ticket.

FLOOD PERIL, GROWS IN ARKANSAS AS RAIN SENDS RIVERS HIGHER

Little Rock, Ark., Feb. 18.—(P)—Rain-soaked Arkansas marshaled state and federal forces today for a fight against a flood described by army engineers as potentially worse than that of 1935.

One levee near Morrilton on the Arkansas, broke, sending water over a farming area ten miles square.

Two Drown in Missouri.

St. Louis, Mo., Feb. 18.—(P)—The state highway patrol said Vernon Gidley, 21 years old, of Boone Terre, and a companion, tentatively identified as Miss Cortel Cown, 17 years old, of Flat River, were drowned when Gidley's automobile stalled in swollen Mill creek, west of Bonne Terre.

Illinois Lowlands Flooded.

Pana, Ill., Feb. 18.—[Special.]—Heavy rainfall for 24 hours over this section sent streams out of their banks today, including the Kaskaskia river and the Robinson creek east of Pana. Damage was reported in the lowlands and river bottoms and some farmers moved their families to the hills.

TWO BOYS RING BELL AND OPEN A CRIME CAREER

When Mrs. Caroline Kozak of 5418 South Wood street answered her front door bell yesterday she was met by a young boy who asked her about payment for a newspaper subscription. She assured him she didn't owe any money and closed the door. A few minutes later there was another ring. A second boy questioned Mrs. Kozak about the first one. She said he'd gone down the street. The second boy left and a little later Mrs. Kozak discovered that two purses containing $360, which her daughter, Mrs. Jane Ciszewski, had left in the kitchen, were missing. The police are looking for the bell ringers.

Wildwood's fiscal affairs were recently investigated by an assembly committee which declared the administration was "corrupt."

ORGANIZE TO KICK RUBBER STAMPS FROM CONGRESS

Business Men Fight
Throttling Laws.

BY ARTHUR EVANS.

A movement to help elect candidates for congress who will not be Charlie McCarthys in Washington was launched yesterday by the Republican Congressional council. This new organization, composed of business men—no politicians—proposes to aid in sending men to congress pledged to stop the throttling of industry and business, big or little, and to stimulate real employment of workers.

Repeal of dictatorship enactments, tax reform and repeal of the surplus profits tax, revision of the social security act to protect beneficiaries, the stopping of monetary manipulation, and reform in relief administration, are items in the program set forth by the council in its initial public meeting at the Lake Shore Athletic club.

Plans to Help Candidates.

The council plans to help candidates who pledge themselves to the program. Its chairman, R. H. Vansant, manager of a creamery company, says it plans to expand into every congressional district where there is a good chance of carrying an election. Many prominent industrialists and business men, Vansant says, are backing the movement, but not publicly, to guard against possible reprisals.

James E. Daniels, counsel for the Republican Congressional council, said: "The aim is to get behind candidates who will go to Washington to serve the electorate and not to function as Charlie McCarthys for the administration."

"America's great need is for congressmen to get off the President's lap and speak for themselves."

Stiffing Tax Burden Assailed.

In its program, the council says: "We believe the majority of American people are eager for an unbiased, honest, and unselfish government. We believe the greatest obstacle to prosperity today is the stifling, compounded, pyramid taxes borne by every individual and institution."

"Such taxes today are used for the building of a political dictatorship which, if permitted to grow unchecked, will destroy our American institutions and nationalize every American. We propose to sponsor legislation that will not only repeal some of the most vicious taxes, such as the surplus profits tax, but the modification of the entire tax structure. "We are opposed to the manipulation of the American monetary system because of the confusion it creates in business, agriculture, and labor. By such manipulation the basis of industry is upset. By raising the price of gold and buying all gold offered to us by foreign powers, we have paid the world war debts of all nations in that war, while the United States still holds the bag for loans made to foreign countries for prosecution of the world war."

A. L. BOWEN CHARGES NONCOMPLIANCE WITH OLD AGE PENSION LAW

Springfield, Ill., Feb. 18.—(P)—The long controversy between the state and several counties over the future administration of old age assistance was renewed today when A. L. Bowen, director of public welfare, charged noncompliance with regulations.

Bowen said several counties with approved lists had failed to send all five nominees to Springfield last month to take written examinations for positions of county superintendent of public welfare. In some instances, he said, only one of the five nominees submitted to a written examination. The law, Bowen said, requires that five submit written tests from each county.

The controversy started last summer, when Gov. Henry Horner insisted that the county nominees be representative of both political parties. Several of the counties objected, and a few still have not submitted lists conforming with the regulation.

Tells Peril of Dictatorship.

"There are bills in congress which, if passed, will delegate to one man power to declare war," Chairman Vansant said. "Already the government has its tentacles in most of our banks and through the surplus profits tax has forced industries to borrow from the banks. A declaration of war would plunge us into a dictatorship from which there would be no return. The government could take over the banks, the banks could take over industry. We believe in preparedness, but not in war."

JARECKI SIGNS UP IN RACE FOR COUNTY JUDGE

His Name Will Be Third on Democratic Ballot.

County Judge Edmund K. Jarecki filed his petition yesterday for Democratic renomination in the April primaries. His name will be third on the ballot for county judge, first place being held by Judge John Prystalski, who was chosen over Judge Jarecki by the regular county Democratic organization. Second place is held by William J. Boyd.

Accompanying Judge Jarecki to the office of County Clerk Michael J. Flynn, were four Horner-Courtney leaders, who are backing the judge. They were State's Attorney Thomas J. Courtney, James Slattery, chairman of the Illinois commerce commission, Charles K. Schwartz, head of the state tax commission, and Benjamin S. Adamowski, majority leader in the house at Springfield.

Jarecki's Statement.

"The public will decide," Judge Jarecki said after filing, "whether political bosses have the right to dictate who shall serve the people as judges and officials. I have confidence in the judgment of the people."

Both Judges Jarecki and Prystalski indicated that their speaking campaigns will not start in earnest until a few weeks before the April 12 primaries. Neither spoke at meetings last night.

Judge Jarecki said at least 4,000 watchers would man the polls on primary day, in addition to the regular precinct staffs, to guard against fraud. These will include about 500 senior students of Chicago, Northwestern, De Paul, and Loyola universities and 3,500 special watchers recruited from the Cook county patronage rolls of Gov. Horner, State's Attorney Courtney, Baliff Albert J. Horan of the Municipal court, as well as Jarecki jobholders.

Campbell Petition Filed.

At Springfield, the petition of Bruce A. Campbell of Belleville was filed for Democratic nomination for state treasurer. Campbell is Democratic state chairman, a post he is relinquishing. He has opposed the Horner administration since the 1936 break and is supporting Michael L. Igoe, United States district attorney, for the senatorship nomination. He will run against Speaker Louie E. Lewis, the Horner candidate for state treasurer.

Igoe and Campbell are expected to be endorsed by the Cook county organization within the next eight or ten days. P. A. Nash, county chairman, is expected back from the south some time next week. Albert Lagerstedt, 25 West Ontario street, filed as a Democratic candidate for senatorship nomination yesterday.

BEG YOUR PARDON

In a report yesterday that Julia R. Gragido, 1031 South Morgan street, will be a candidate for the legislature, the name was incorrectly spelled Graddio. She is a sister of County Commissioner Lucy Palermo, not a sister-in-law, as was reported.

terday at Springfield. Elmer H. Vogel, 5140 Loomis street, Democrat, filed for superintendent of public instruction, and R. Williams Buckley, 2435 Marquette road, Democrat, for Supreme court clerk. James J. Curtis and Donald D. McFeeley, Chicago Democrats, filed for congress in the 6th district.

Monday will be last day for filing.

COURT GETS PLAN TO BREAK TRANSIT MERGER TANGLE

7 Point Program Urged to Speed Unification.

BY WILLIAM BROMAGE.
The first step in the program of Federal Judge James H. Wilkerson to force settlement of the Chicago traction tangle was taken yesterday when Walter A. Shaw, adviser to the court on transit matters, submitted recommendations for negotiating a unification of the Chicago Surface Lines and the Chicago Rapid Transit company (the elevated).

Shaw suggested that the city transit modernization plan should be taken as the basis in the negotiations. Work on unification and franchise plans should proceed concurrently, he said.

Stresses Unification Needs.
Shaw stressed the necessity for unification as a prerequisite to a long deferred modernization program and made seven recommendations, three of which are definitely concerned with breaking the deadlock.

Apparently upholding the position of the surface lines, he asserted that as progress is made on the unification matter steps should be taken looking toward the drafting of a new franchise.

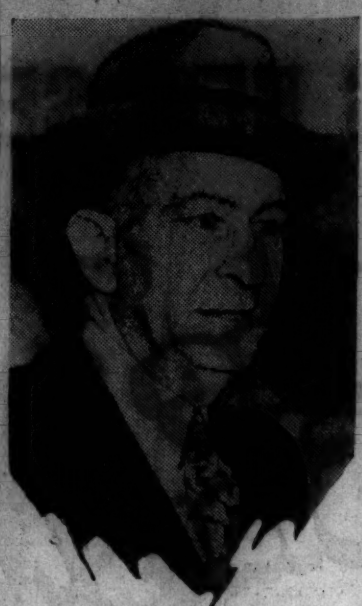

This has been the point of difference on which negotiations have stalled. The elevated company has insisted that a consolidation agreement should precede ordinance negotiations with the city. The street car interests have contended that a basis of consolidation cannot be fixed without knowing the provisions of the new ordinance.

The city traction plan requires unification of all local transportation facilities. This could be accomplished either through financial consolidation or unified operation.

May Name Coordinator.
Shaw suggested that Judge Wilkerson designate the mechanics to insure immediate and continuous progress. If this recommendation is followed it is expected the court will appoint an independent party to act as coordinator in the negotiations.

His suggestion that the city plan be used as the initial basis for unification proceedings is expected to expedite the proceedings. The city plan provides for the construction of subways, elevated highways, and complete modernization of all local transportation facilities.

Judge Wilkerson asked attorneys for the companies to study the Shaw report and return to his court next Wednesday to discuss the recommendations.

10,000 Attend Four Day Dental Society Meeting

The seventy-fourth annual midwinter meeting of the Chicago Dental society, closing yesterday in the Stevens hotel, had a four day attendance of more than 10,000, largest in the society's history. Exhibits and clinics were features of the final session.

STRIKE LEADER SURRENDERS AS A MAN OF PEACE

Denies Any Knowledge of Bat Murder.

A slender middle aged man, tastefully dressed, walked into the state's attorney's office yesterday, stated he abhorred violence in any form and expressed willingness to answer any questions the prosecutors might wish to ask him.

He is William J. Donovan, founder and financial secretary of the Inside Laundry Workers' union. He had been sought more than three days for questioning on the murder of Lloyd Rourke, independent laundry driver, who was bludgeoned to death with a ball bat during a strike of Donovan's union at the Del Prado and Fairfax hotels on Hyde Park boulevard.

Tells Stand for Peace.
"Any charges that I know anything about the murder or who hired the sluggers are ridiculous," Donovan said. "I have been a union man a long time and I have always used my influence to keep strikes orderly and on a high plane. I am opposed to all types of violence. As to the Trades and Crafts council (in which his union is a power) I am only a member of it."

Donovan was asked immediately by Assistant State's Attorney Mal Coghlan what he had done with his car. The automobile had been as widely sought as Donovan himself so that witnesses of Rourke's murder might see it.

"I have my car here," Donovan replied. "It was standing in front of my hotel at the time of this occurrence."

Agree It's Not the Car.
The machine was viewed shortly afterward and the witnesses were unanimous in declaring that it was not the one used by the men who slugged Rourke. Donovan's auto is of the victoria type, with a luggage trunk on the back. The one used by the sluggers is said to have been a four door sedan.

The witnesses included Policemen Charles Deane and Edward Barchard of the Hyde Park station, and Andrew Bradshaw, colored doorman at the Fairfax hotel. They said they had seen the slayers' car in the vicinity of the Fairfax hotel about the time of the attack.

Gives Account of Movements.
Assistant State's Attorney Coghlan then asked Donovan to account for his movements on Feb. 10, the day of the slugging.

"At 1:30 p. m. I was in your office for a meeting with Capt. Daniel Gilbert and union men in the interest of keeping the strike orderly," said Donovan. "I left soon afterward and was driven to Gold's restaurant on the west side for lunch. We stayed there until after 2 p. m. [the hour of the slugging], then drove downtown."

Donovan then was questioned about a statement by the widow of the slain laundry driver that Lindgren and Donovan had attempted to buy him out during the strike to deprive the Del Prado and Fairfax hotels of laundry service.

He replied that he had tried to win Rourke over to his side of the controversy, but that the driver had described laundry service to the hotels. At the conclusion of the questioning First Assistant State's Attorney Wilbert F. Crowley ordered Donovan released.

At about the same time Attorney Goldberg, acting for the Laundry Workers' union, went before Chief Justice Cornelius Harrington in the Criminal court and petitioned for a writ of habeas corpus for Ben Conn, Donovan's chauffeur, who has been held since Thursday. The writ is returnable at 10 a. m. today.

Cohn was seized for questioning on Donovan's whereabouts, but was identified at the detective bureau showup Thursday night as the chauffeur for ball bat sluggers who on June 10 of last year, beat Paul Stoddard, 1836 Mohawk street, employed to enforce the Judge Landis building trades award.

STATE CALLS 12 TO TELL JURY OF RACKET THREATS.

Cleveland, O., Feb. 12.—(Special.)—A dozen witnesses will take the stand here tomorrow for the state in an effort to prove alleged shakedowns by John E. McGee and Donald A. Campbell, Cleveland labor leaders on trial for extortion, County Prosecutor Frank T. Cullitan announced tonight after the fourth day of the trial.

McGee, president of the laborers' district council, and Campbell, president of the painters' council, are charged with using their positions to extort $1,200 from Vernon Stouffer, chain restaurant proprietor, on threat that labor trouble would keep a new Stouffer restaurant here from opening.

McGee and Campbell are two of four union officials indicted here on blackmail and shakedown charges after an eight month investigation of widespread labor racketeering.

CURB ON MARINE STRIFE HEADED TOWARD DISCARD

Victory for Miss Perkins Is Indicated.

BY CHESLY MANLY.
(Chicago Tribune Press Service.)

Washington, D. C., Feb. 18.—[Special.]—There were indications today that the Roosevelt administration will not support legislation proposed by Chairman Joseph F. Kennedy of the federal maritime commission to curb mutinous labor disorders in the American merchant marine.

The bill proposed by Mr. Kennedy as the only solution of a labor problem threatening the existence of the merchant marine is opposed with equal violence by Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins and the communist-infested C. I. O. maritime unions.

Today's events boding no good for Mr. Kennedy's mediation and arbitration proposals were:
1. President Roosevelt left for Hyde Park without seeing the chairman of the senate commerce and labor committees, thus leaving them in the dark as to his attitude in the Kennedy-Perkins controversy.

2. Mr. Kennedy resigned as chairman of the maritime commission, and will be on his way to London as ambassador from the United States when Mr. Roosevelt returns from Hyde Park next week. Mr. Kennedy will be 3,000 miles away, while Secretary Perkins will be in Washington.

3. The senate labor committee, headed by Senator Elbert D. Thomas (D., Utah), a member of the La Follette Civil Liberties committee and a C. I. O. partisan, began consideration of a proposal to emasculate the Kennedy bill and give Miss Perkins a victory.

Conference Plan Fades.
When Mr. Kennedy testified Wednesday before the senate committee exhorting Miss Perkins for her opposition to the bill, he did so with what he regarded as the full approval of President Roosevelt. He had just come from a conference with the President.

Consequently Mr. Kennedy made tentative arrangements for a White House conference with Senator Royal S. Copeland (D., N. Y.), chairman of the commerce committee, and Senator Thomas, chairman of the labor committee. He wanted the President to tell the chairman what he had been told, and Senator Copeland wanted to pin the President down. The White House was to notify the senators when it would be convenient for the President to see them, and the White House never called.

Meeting apart from the commerce committee, Senator Thomas' committee heard further objections today from Ralph Emerson, communist lobbyist for the C. I. O. maritime unions and recipient of a letter in which Miss Perkins first announced her opposition to the Kennedy bill.

Would Extend Labor Act.
The Kennedy bill would extend the scope of the railway labor act and the authority of the national mediation board to the maritime industry. Chairman Thomas said his committee was considering an amendment to postpone the effective date of the mediation and arbitration provisions until collective bargaining under the Wagner labor relations act had become fully operative in the maritime industry.

He said there was no agreement as to the length of time the effective date should be postponed. It was intimated that the determination would be left to Miss Perkins, who told the senate committee that the maritime industry was not ripe for mediation and arbitration procedure, that the legislation was premature, and that the maritime commission, anyway, ought to mind its own business.

Mr. Kennedy, who believes Miss Perkins was interfering with the commission's business, said she was using the "pretext" argument as a pretext for her opposition to the principle of the legislation.

WIFE PLANNING TO VISIT CAPONE IN ISLAND PRISON

San Francisco, Cal., Feb. 18.—[Special.]—The isolation of Al Capone at Alcatraz Island prison this dread spot it is to inmates still stands between Al Capone, who is ill, and his wife, who was reported today to be planning a request to visit him. Should Mrs. Capone visit the island she could talk to her husband only through the heavy glass screen in the visiting room that absolutely eliminates the possibility of transmission of secret messages, because guards hear all conversations. Such a visit, it was declared, would be possible only when Capone leaves the prison hospital, where he now is able to walk around.

Robs 2 Women, but Gives Back $1 with a Blessing

An apologetic bandit held up Mrs. Franklin McCormick, 720 North Washington, and Miss June Owen, 1046 Lake Shore drive, in front of the former's residence last night. After taking $2 from Mrs. McCormick and $5 from Miss Owen he said he was robbing them only because he was hungry, and threw $1 back. "God bless you," he said in departing. Mrs. McCormick's husband is poetry reader on a radio poetry hour.

Woman Beaten in Home; Seek Estranged Husband

Mrs. Ann Paulick, 26 years old, mother of four children, was severely beaten on the head with a hammer in her home at 559 West 10th street last night. She told Sgt. Walter Rodomski of the Chicago Latin police her assailant was her husband, George Paulick, 31 years old, from whom she has been estranged about a year. He is being sought.

RETIRED BLACKSMITH FOUND DEAD.
Rudolph Bachman, 78 years old, 9088 South Washington avenue, a retired blacksmith, was found dead, by autopsy of a heart attack in the basement, at 2047 West 141st street last night.

Ship Board Choices

[Associated Press Photos.]

Rear Admiral Emory Scott Land (left), named chairman of national maritime commission, and Max O'Rell Truitt, appointed a member of the board.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 18.—[Special.]—Joseph P. Kennedy, the administration's trouble shooter, was sworn in today as ambassador to Great Britain. He took the oath of office in the office of President Roosevelt after he submitted his resignation as chairman of the maritime commission.

The first Irishman and Catholic to represent this country at the court of St. James's, Kennedy will sail for London next Wednesday with his wife and nine children.

Later in the day, aboard his special train bound for Hyde Park, where he will enjoy a five-day vacation, the President named Rear Admiral Emory Scott (Jerry) Land, a member of the maritime commission, as Kennedy's successor to the chairmanship. Land was Kennedy's choice for the post.

Max O'Rell Truitt, St. Louis, counsel for the commission, was named for the balance of the Kennedy term, which expires in the fall.

Thousands Greet Planes.
BUENOS AIRES, Feb. 18.—(AP)—Six United States air corps bombers today hurdled the lofty, snow capped Andes and landed here for a warmly welcomed good will call at the end of a record breaking flight from Miami, Fla.

Thousands cheered from rooftops, streets, and El Palomar air base as five of the flying fortresses arrived at noon from Lima, Peru, the only stop of the squadron on its way from Miami. But it remained for the bomber commanded by Maj. J. V. Meloy, which had been delayed in Lima because of propeller trouble, to join its mates with a new record tacked to its tail.

Landing in the midst of a rainstorm approximately six hours after the other five, the sixth bomber completed the hop from Lima in 11 hours and 10 minutes, shearing more than an hour from the time of its sister ships.

The six bombers carried 48 men besides the flight commander, Lieut. Col. Robert Olds.

HALE 6,000 MILE MASS FLIGHT OF ARMY BOMBERS

Hop to Buenos Aires Sets Mark for World.

(Chicago Tribune Press Service.)

Washington, D. C., Feb. 18.—[Special.]—The 6,000 mile flight of six United States army flying fortresses from Miami, Fla., to Buenos Aires was hailed here today as the outstanding mass flight in the history of aviation.

In military circles there was rejoicing that this country has given the nations of the world a demonstration of the efficiency of the American air corps that will serve as something to shoot at for the next ten years.

Upon the successful completion of the flight it was acknowledged privately that it was intended to exhibit America's might to the world and give an answer to the 3,200 mile flight from West Africa to Rio de Janeiro recently staged by the Italian government.

Doubt Record Will Be Touched.
Bruno Mussolini, son of Italy's dictator, led three planes to Brazil, which, by a recent coup d'état, now is under Fascist government. It is generally believed here that the American flight offset that of Italy and has set a record that Italy and other nations will not touch for some time to come.

Immediately after the war department was notified of the successful completion of the trip Secretary of War Henry H. Woodring and Gen. Malin Craig, army chief of staff, sent congratulatory messages to the flyers.

Day By Day Story of the Experimental Farms

By Bob Becker

Farm 'Coons

February 18, 1938.
OX traps set in various places on the experimental farm catch a few raccoons every year, for the furbarbers find the thick wooded areas, the ponds, the food supply, and other features of the farm quite attractive. On several occasions we have been greeted with this remark from the flockmaster: "Well, I got another 'coon last night in one of the box traps set near the big pond." Several of these interesting animals caught on the farm have been presented to the Brookfield zoo.

One is apt to see the tracks of raccoons anywhere on the farm. We have noticed them in the woods, but usually we see more raccoon tracks near the ponds in the spring.

The 'coons usually live in the woods near water, as they are fond of crawfish, frogs, and other aquatic food.

rather close together. Although the raccoon will hole up in a snug den in a hollow tree in extremely cold weather, here in Chicagoland he comes out of hiding on mild, thawing days.

Invariably the raccoon does his prowling for food after dark, as this animal, like several other furbarbers, is largely nocturnal in habits. That is why 'coon hunting, with those musical voiced 'coon hounds taking the trail, is such an exciting and colorful sport. On a fairly mild, damp night the dogs pick up the scent of the animals and trail them, the end of the hunt usually finding the raccoon in a hole in some large tree.

Like Eggs, Any Style.
In the spring months when Muscovy ducks are nesting you may see raccoon tracks in the mud along the shore of a pond. If one of the animals finds a clutch of eggs he can't resist the meal that is his for the taking. After one of these raids on the nests the raccoon's footprints give him away. Reading such tracks, the flockmaster knows when to set traps.

But as a rule the raccoon is a pretty well behaved furbarber. Unlike the weasel and mink he does not come into the poultry yard and destroy birds for the sheer love of killing. He is not a bloodthirsty flesh eater like some of the other furbarbers. Smart, a good tree climber, and valuable for his fur, the raccoon is an interesting four footed resident on the farm.

Sprawling Tracks.
The track of the raccoon is best described as sprawling. The hind foot is much larger than the front and therefore leaves a correspondingly larger imprint in mud or snow. When the 'coon is loping he places his feet

THE FLOOD TIDE OF BARBARISM.

To the wreck of Austria may soon be added the ruin of Czechoslovakia, that little oasis of people aspiring to freedom, surrounded by modern barbarism. Hitler's success in imposing Nazism upon the helpless land of his birth was immediately followed by an outbreak of the German Nazis against the Czechs, all too evidently intended to produce the familiar border incidents which are the stock in trade of aggression.

The arithmetic of the new barbarism is already terrifying. Germany, Italy, Russia, and Rumania account for 300 million people in Europe and the Asiatic soviet who do not know what it is to draw a free breath and who have lost liberty, culture and civilized institutions.

Nearly 160 million are directly under the military autocracy of Japan although that Asiatic military government has permitted the survival of more vestiges of individualism than can exist under European Fascism. When Japan has added China to its possessions, 450 million more people will be brought under military control.

To the European figures 28 million in Spain may be joined by the aid Mussolini gives France. It is another flood and on these vast waters the ark is not very big. The manner in which the Fascist alliance has worked is instructive. Mussolini risked his neck to defy the league powers and seize Ethiopia. He succeeded and Japan, already having Manchuria, took its turn in China. Italy and Germany had tested Great Britain and France in Spain with every provocation on land and sea they could offer. Mussolini even seized the Balearic Islands. Then it was Hitler's turn and he, having taken Austria, is preparing to take Czechoslovakia and dreaming again of the Ukraine and the Urals, of their grains and metals.

Seven million Ethiopians, 6 million, 7 hundred thousand Austrians, 450 million Chinese, nearly 15 million Czechoslovakians, and 28 million Spaniards are spoils or prizes of war whose fate is sealed or in the balance. The two hateful systems of soul and body destroying dictatorship, Fascism and communism, although forever growing at each other, avoid the conflict which might be their common ruin and the salvation of civilization.

AN AMERICAN DECLARATION.

The Executive club of Chicago is to be congratulated upon the declaration of principles adopted in the form of resolutions at a recent meeting of that highly regarded association of business men. They represent the reasoned conclusions of men who have heavy responsibilities in the private enterprise upon which the prosperity of the American people so largely depends. They speak from experience, from the actualities of economics, and from participation in the democratic life of the nation. They speak not as a class, but as free men who cherish the common heritage and would preserve it from the disintegration threatening it. It has always been the good sense of the American people to respect such men, and it will be a disastrous day for the nation if and when demagoguery and unscrupulous agitation are substituted for their influence and their counsel.

The resolutions reaffirm allegiance to constitutional principles, to the checks and balances which prevent autocratic government, to the independence and integrity of the courts, to the preservation of the states and local self-government against absorption by centralized power, and to the preservation of private enterprise and the liberties guaranteed in the bill of rights. They protest excessive taxation and growth of bureaucracy, which are the death of free government, and reckless experiment in regimentation and government control. In short, they cover the essential issues which confront the American people at this time and which they must meet if they are to preserve their heritage.

The subversive influences which have swept over the country for several years, exploiting the suffering and sacrifices of the depression, have seemed to have it all their own way. This will not continue. The good sense and sound character of the American people must assert themselves and are doing so with more and more emphasis. In the end they will be heard and will prevail.

MR. ICKES TO THE BRITISH.

Mr. Ickes has been signed up by the British Broadcasting company to do his speech on the Sixty Families for British listeners. If he thinks he will get himself a tablet in Westminster he's probably mistaken, but the opportunity to cut an international figure is fire water and he'll come out whooping. Mr. Ickes knows he is designed for bigger things and thinks this may be one of them.

Many of the British listeners may enjoy it, some because their opinion of the trans-Atlantic English speaking breed will be confirmed and others because they will think they are getting some good telephone numbers and addresses. The Sixty Families may note an increase in their sticker mail. The British Broadcasting company would not permit an Englishman to make such a speech on the air even if it were not concocted so completely of malice and falsehood. Probably it's to increase the "very happy" relations to which Foreign Secretary Eden recently referred. Mr. Ickes is one of a large number of gentlemen in Washington who have thoroughly enjoyed five years of depression and hard times. He and they have had nothing to worry about. They have had plenty of money, not their own, to throw around. The national troubles have not cost them a nickel or a night's sleep. They can commit blunders and follies ad lib. and not be a penny out of pocket. They are well provided for. When the bill for their mistakes is presented they can laugh and pass it on to the public treasury. They eat cake and like it.

VICTIMS OF RELIEF.

The house has voted another quarter of a billion dollars to the President to spend on relief between now and July 1. This is in addition to the billion and a half previously appropriated for this year. The approval of the bill in the senate is being taken for granted in Washington. This year we are spending for relief alone about twice as much as we ordinarily spent for all the purposes of government—army, navy, debt service, reclamation, pensions, and everything else—in any of the years before the war. The sums for relief are so colossal that only the fewest minds can comprehend them; yet any one who ventures to suggest that the relief money is not being spent intelligently—a fact which is easily proved—is instantly accused of favoring and promoting the starvation of the unfortunate.

Those who have taken upon themselves the thankless task of exposing the stupidities and dishonesties of relief have done so precisely because they wished to help the victims of depression. It is obvious that the present management of the federal relief business, for all its pious pretenses, has no such purpose. The proof is found in recent articles in Tues Tribune by Clifford Blackburn and Will O'Neil.

Mr. Blackburn showed that the men in WPA are coming to think of their occupation as a more or less legitimate career, not as an unfortunate and humiliating necessity. They are encouraged in this attitude by the WPA administration which, as Mr. O'Neil showed, makes only the feeblest of efforts to find jobs in industry for the shovel-leaners.

The politicians in charge of relief naturally are not eager to see their superb political machine disrupted. That being so, it is not remarkable that the WPA organization has no classified records of the skills and experience possessed by the men on its rolls. If a demand should arise in industry for bricklayers, tannery workers, or any other type of labor, the WPA wouldn't know where to look among its 75,000 dependents for men to fill these jobs.

Theoretically the information is supposed to be in possession of the Illinois state employment service, but practically it is not. The plain fact is that the relief agencies, individually and together, are making almost no effort to get able-bodied men off the rolls. That is the largest service which could be performed for the unfortunate and it is the service which is most neglected. In consequence, these men and their families are being condemned to a miserable existence. They are degraded; the taxpayers are overburdened; the national economy is forced to support a huge number of drones. And nothing is being done about it.

The business men's committee recently reported in favor of a reclassification of the men on relief with a view to finding jobs for them. The lack of an aggressive employment service was also stressed. There should be the closest cooperation between the relief and employment services with a view to getting as many men as possible off the rolls as rapidly as possible. Finding jobs for the men and women on relief is the most useful service and the greatest kindness that can be performed for them.

Every one recognizes that the task is a most difficult one. Even under pressure of war necessity, the army made a mess of the effort to place the right man in the right job. Officers and men possessed of skill and experience in automobile maintenance found themselves caring for horses, while cowboys were assigned to the hospitals as ward hands. Urgent calls for men possessed of particular skills were often ignored and often used to rid a regiment of its undesirable.

Administrators are generally disposed to put their own interest ahead. Those directing the relief organization are probably no exception. Their business is the relief business and the longer the roll of relievers, the bigger the business. It will take a great deal of pressure, continually applied, before the WPA and kindred agencies will take the duty of finding jobs for their men seriously.

Editorial of the Day

FROM HUMBLE GROUND.
 (Grand Rapids Press.)

The death of Harvey S. Firestone, great rubber tycoon, this week removed the second member of a noted triumvirate of friends that first was broken with the passing of Thomas Edison. Henry Ford alone remains of this group whose close association became a symbol of American opportunity.

Mr. Firestone's death once more draws attention to the humble beginnings of these men, all of whom were born in modest circumstances and all of whom carved careers in the pattern of the great American scheme.

It is important to note these facts in this period when smaller minds and political agitators are prating about the "Sixty Families" and the rulers of America and seeking to demonstrate that this country has ceased to offer the chance of greatness to the average individual.

Call the roll—Ford, Edison, Firestone, Zernurray, Knudsen, Fairless, and scores of others in the top rank of industry today. How many of them were products of the "Sixty Families" or of any ruling class?

So long as we can point to such examples in contemporary life there will be no foundation for the contention that opportunity is dead in this country or that the traditional right of every man to advance through his own ability is gone.

When the president of a great grocery chain was in Grand Rapids a short time ago he declared that opportunities at the top had been multiplied rather than reduced. He asserted that large corporations were eager to find men who could fill these positions and that there was a dearth of material, not an over-supply.

If there is a feeling today that opportunity does not knock as frequently at the doors of American youth as heretofore, is it the fault of the system or is it because ambition has lagged and initiative has been allowed to become dulled? Are there too many who want to attain the heights without paying the cost?

How to the Line, let the quips fall where they may.

PROBABLY CHICAGO'S most brilliant manipulator of cards is a Matt Schullen, a blue-eyed, genial restaurateur in the German district in the vicinity of North avenue. Patrons crowd nightly into Schullen's, which has been operating for 22 years, to drink beer, eat thick steaks, and watch Matt do his card tricks. He moves from one table to another, astonishing the diners with his incredible feats. Matt's father, now 83, white haired, with a little pointed beard, once ran the famous Quincey No. 9 on La Salle street, one of Chicago's oldest—if not oldest—saloons.

ONE OF THE INTERESTING SECTIONS of Chicago is this German district in the vicinity of North avenue. There are many German and Bavarian restaurants; also, of recent years, several Hungarian ones, due to an influx of Hungarians into the neighborhood. The groceries and delicatessens sell herrings and dill pickles from big tubs and vats; the big, soft German pretzels called Schwaben pretzels, and dark bauerbrot, which is like pumpernickel. One of the oldest and most famous of these delicatessens is Kuhn's, which handles such imported delicacies as eels in jelly, lingonberries, Holland pickles in wine sauce, and sprats. Bushel baskets of poppy seed, vats of plum butter, and butter cream cheese from Austria are to be found here.

EDNA BROWN, that volunteer stooge who discovered the man employed in Lake street who wears a straw hat at his work, called up again yesterday. Seems she passes a wholesale grocery house on La Salle street after she parks her car on Grand avenue to walk downtown to her office, and thus discovered that an elaborate arrangement of cans in the window was asymmetrical, due to one last can having been left off a point in the design. She called up the firm and a Mr. R. B. Newton assured her they would add the missing can immediately.

 On the corner of Lincoln and Belmont avenues there is a doctor's office occupied by three doctors. They have solved their problem as to the order of their names in gold letters on the window thus: On one window they are "Dr. Exel, Dr. Tarr, and Dr. Johnson." On the other window "Dr. Johnson, Dr. Tarr, and Dr. Exel." What bothers me is that poor Dr. Tarr is always in the middle.

THE FANNY BLOOMFIELD ZEISLER story printed the other day brought in another one that illustrates the love of music that apparently ran in the family of the famous Chicago pianist. A niece of Mme. Zeisler was one day left in care of a friend of the family, who built a snowman for her amusement.

"Whom shall I make it resemble," she asked.
 "Bitte, machen Sie den Mendelssohn," the child replied.

How to Keep Well

To the limit of space questions pertaining to hygiene and prevention of disease will be answered in this column. Personal replies will be made to inquiries, under proper limitations, when return stamped envelope is inclosed. Dr. Cutter will not make diagnoses or prescribe for individual disease.

A DANGEROUS AGE MADE SAFE.

DURING the last generation our knowledge of the rearing of healthy infants and children has grown apace. We are today preserving more lives in this age bracket than at any time in the history of the world. This includes not only the prevention and treatment of disease, but a more rational understanding of the influences of heredity and environment. In addition, we recognize the necessity of teaching the formation of proper habits, giving due attention to the problems of growth, nutrition, exercise, and rest.

Thousands of babies are now failing to live with a program that covers practically every day of their lives up to the age of two years. Information on child care is so widespread that many parents are highly competent to supervise the management of their children.

But some may not be so well trained—how should there be little real excuse. No mother should take the time to announce that "the baby has been seen a doctor since his birth." The pity is that, although a youngster may appear well, he may be underweight, show symptoms of anemia or rickets, or be addicted to crying spells which usually indicate poor and/or insufficient diet. Any one of these may mean a doctor since his birth.

The pity is that, although a youngster may appear well, he may be underweight, show symptoms of anemia or rickets, or be addicted to crying spells which usually indicate poor and/or insufficient diet. Any one of these may mean a doctor since his birth.

One health rule requires constant reiteration, namely, that it is dangerous to rear a child in a home in which some member of the family is suffering from lung tuberculosis. Regardless of present lung tuberculosis, a mother with pulmonary disease must forego the joy and companionship of her child until her lesions are healed, the baby in the meantime being cared for in noninfectious surroundings.

ABOUT TRENCH MOUTH.

Mrs. W. writes: My niece is afflicted with trench mouth. How is this contracted? Could she develop lockjaw? Should she use separate dishes? There are several small children in the family.

Trench mouth occurs chiefly in children and young adults who have become weak and debilitated. A weak mouth, however, about the teeth, inflamed gums, and some blood disease may predispose to the infection. There is no possibility of lockjaw. An antiseptic mouth wash is of value here, but the infection is caused properly in soaps and hot water, followed by a scalding rinse, there is no danger of contagion. Sodium perborate is helpful.

M. J. M. writes: Is it a harmful practice to eat about 15 ounces of cloves per week? What effect do they have on the heart?

REPLY.
 Cloves are the dried flower of a tropical evergreen. They have no nutritive power and, like other spices, are used solely as appetizers. There is no effect on the heart, but they disturb the digestion by irritating the mucous lining of the stomach. Cloves should not be eaten by themselves, but only in conjunction with other foods. In large quantities the oil which they contain may irritate the kidneys.

FROM ACROSS THE SEA

BY SAM NEWBER.
 (Chicago Tribune Staff Service.)

LONDON.—British army officers expect soon to get good news from War Minister Leslie Horne-Belisha on promotion in the lower commissioned ranks.

Following up his younger leaders policy, as THE TRIBUNE on Jan. 4 reported he was preparing to do, Horne-Belisha has continued to pass outstanding younger officers over the heads of scores of older, more experienced but less brilliant and progressive men.

But "younger" as used in that connection is purely comparative. The men in question were colonels passed over the heads of brigadiers and major generals, or acting brigadiers suddenly made major generals. They were young in comparison to the men they replaced. But in actual years the youngest of the new generals is 45.

What Horne-Belisha has to face now is the lack of suitable young lieutenants and captains to be pushed ahead to provide the young generals of ten or twelve years hence or later.

He claims to have settled the problem, of recruiting enlisted men. Lower physical standards, free false teeth, free eyeglasses, permission to marry, enlistment on approval and a score of other points have helped to boost recruiting.

But there is still the problem of commissioned officers. The army at present is 1,000 short of its normal strength in commissioned officers, and the shortage is on the increase.

Snobbery still bars the way to the ambitious youth who would like to rise from the bottom to commissioned rank. The British will deny that it is impossible, they will point out numerous cases of men who have done it, but few have reached the top of the army list.

The fact remains that it takes considerable luck for even the outstanding men, and that a man with ability superior to that of the average officer has little chance of winning a commission without lucky breaks to help.

Horne-Belisha hopes to remedy that. He has said he wanted to democratize the army, and army circles believe practical steps in that direction are about to be announced.

Most of the young officers who are being added are not really of the standard the army needs. It is generally admitted. They are cultured, well educated young men with good manners toward those they feel merit them.

That is not enough in these days of highly technical warfare and mechanization. Young men who would be more suitable for the work refuse to enter the army because they prefer to go where promotion is more certain and more rapid and where pay is higher.

Many of the more intelligent enlisted men would make ideal officers, given proper training, for modern mechanical equipment and know exactly what it can do and what it cannot.

Most of the present commissioned officers lack that practical knowledge of the new tools.

Just what Horne-Belisha will do to make it easier for enlisted men to get commissions is still his secret. Steps he plans to improve conditions for the present officers are understood to include:

1. Promotion on a fixed schedule up to the rank of captain. This is already done in the Indian army, where a sublieutenant (second lieutenant) becomes a full lieutenant after three years' satisfactory service and a captain after nine more.

2. Promotion by selection for the ranks of major, lieutenant colonel, and above and as the United States navy has long done.

3. To avoid hardship, those who are passed over for promotion will be allowed to remain in active service in their rank, for example, 45 years, if they are captains.

4. Reduced pay and pensions will be the substantial increase.

Most important is the merit basis of the whole system, which, he believes, will encourage brilliant young men to enter the army and will keep them in it.

Assurance of a respectable retired pay or pension will compensate those who are passed over as they reach the higher ranks, where there is less room.

THE FORGOTTEN BANJO.

Chicago, Feb. 15.—With the wave of nationalism that has been sweeping over the country, why hasn't more attention been given to our music?

We undulate to the rumba rhythm of the Spanish guitar, we plink the Hawaiian ukelele, and sit under the strings of the Hawaiian guitar, we strain the vocal chords with pseudo-operatic arias while energetically pumping the Italian accordion, or squeeze box, and all the while our own national instrument, the banjo, whose virtue plinkety-plank has helped to make red blooded American history, stands neglected in the corner, gathering cobwebs.

Can it be that our nation has gone effete, preferring the soft, sensuous twing-twang of Latin music to the vibrant, staccato notes, the sparkling, glorious rhythm of our own banjo?

W. B. HYGNORSTROM.

PARABLE.

Ripon, Wis., Feb. 15.—Once upon a time there was a farmer who sold two chickens and with the proceeds bought two shirts.

So the farmer had two shirts and the city man had two chickens. The city man then along came the New Deal and told the farmer he should get more money for his chickens by making them scarcer—he must not raise so many and then he would get more income. The New Deal also told the workman in the city that he must work fewer hours and get more money. That, of course, caused manufactured products to cost more money.

Now the farmer brought one chicken to market. He felt fine. He went to buy some shirts, but found that shirts had also doubled in price. So he got one shirt.

Now the farmer has one shirt and the city man has one chicken, whereas without the New Deal the farmer could have had two shirts and the city man could have had two chickens.

This is called "the more abundant life." H. F. DIEDERICH.

MODERNIZATION OF THE RAIL.

Chicago, Feb. 15.—A regular reader cannot help but enjoy the editorial columns of This Chicago Tribune. However, the observation public highway transportation should be employed only to supplement rail operations, as contained in a recent editorial entitled "Modernization of the Rail," solicits comment.

Competition is an important factor in business, and the service offered by the railroads is no exception. It is the duty of the public to see that the railroads are not for parallel automotive competition. Further, elasticity of truck operation in the handling of freight presents a factor that the railroads today cannot match. There is room in the transportation field for both railroads and in the public interest each should continue in competition with the other.

CONVICT PLAYBOY
JEWEL BANDITS;
TWO GET LASHES

Cat o' Nine Tails, Prison

Terms Ordered.

BY SAM BREWER.

(Chicago Tribune Press Service.)

LONDON, Feb. 18.—Twenty strokes of the much dreaded cat-o-nine-tails and seven years imprisonment today were ordered for one of the four Mayfair society "playboys," convicted of beating a jeweler so seriously that his skull was fractured while robbing him of $65,000 in diamond rings last Dec. 20. He is Robert Harley, 26 years old, reported to be a former resident of America.

Fifteen strokes of the "ca." and five years imprisonment were ordered for David Wilmer, 24, who was found guilty of conspiracy to rob, of robbery, and of personal violence.

Two Escape Whippings.

Two other members of the quartet escaped the whippings. Peter Jenkins, 22, was sentenced to three years in prison, and John Christopher Mainwaring Lonsdale, 24, was sentenced to a term of eighteen months in jail.

Lord Chief Justice Hewart, who pronounced the sentences after a trial in Old Bailey court, rarely orders whipping and this is understood to be one of a half dozen times in his whole career that he has considered the crime sufficiently heinous to warrant such punishment.

Jeweler Lured to Hotel.

The quartet, all of whom are widely known figures in fashionable night spots of London, lured jeweler Etienne Belenger to a hotel room to show them some rings, according to the prosecution. Harley, hidden in an adjoining room, beat the salesman with a blackjack upon a signal from Wilmer, and then all four fled with eight diamond rings.

Harley had served as a police informer, and told police before this case he had committed big for them but apparently decided to go through with the robbery instead.

Sons of Respected Families.

The four convicted men were said to have been educated at well known schools and came from respected families. Lonsdale is the son of a prosperous business man of Calgary, Canada, and was a cadet officer in the air force in 1933. Harley and Wilmer are sons of distinguished officers, now dead.

Although not brought out at the trial, but disclosed tonight by police, Jenkins has been convicted in five cases of obtaining credit by fraud. A similar charge is pending against Harley. Wilmer was convicted last April of malicious damage, but was acquitted of an assault charge.

Belenger, the victim of the young thieves, now is sufficiently recovered to attend to business.

CROWD MENACES

COP WHO SEIZES

NEGRO AUTOIST

Lieut. Anthony De Grazio of the Sheffield avenue station was forced to fire a warning shot last night to hold off a large crowd of colored men who threatened to take a colored prisoner from him at Lake street and Damen avenue. Seven police squads arrived to disperse the crowd.

The incident occurred at Lieut. De Grazio's wife, Tessie; his daughter, Kathleen, 10 years old, and his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Nicholas De Grazio, were driving to a hospital to see a relative. A car driven by Fisher Sattisfield, 29 years old, colored, 2229 Walnut street, struck the lieutenant's car and continued on.

Lieut. De Grazio chased and caught Sattisfield at Lake and Damen, and sent his wife into a tavern at 1958 Lake street to call police. Meantime a crowd of Negroes gathered and challenged the lieutenant's right to arrest Sattisfield.

What Strange Powers

Did The Ancients Possess?

EVERY important discovery relating to mind power, sound thinking and cause and effect, as applied to self-advancement, was known centuries ago, before the masses could read and write.

Much has been written about the wise men of old. A popular fallacy has it that their secrets of personal power and successful living were lost to the world. Knowledge of nature's laws, accumulated through the ages, is never lost. At times the great truths possessed by the sages were hidden from unscrupulous men in high places, but never destroyed.

Why Were Their Secrets Closely Guarded?

Only recently, as time is measured, not more than twenty generations ago, less than 1/1000th of 1% of the earth's people were thought capable of receiving basic knowledge about the laws of life, for it is an elementary truism that knowledge is power and that power cannot be entrusted to the ignorant and the unworthy.

Wisdom is not readily attainable by the general public; nor recognized when right within reach. The average person absorbs a multitude of details about things, but goes through life without ever knowing where and how to acquire mastery of the fundamentals of the inner mind—that mysterious silent something which "whispers" to you from within.

Fundamental Laws of Nature.

Lincoln Volume
a Literary Mine for Information

BY FANNY BUTCHER.

"The Hidden Lincoln," by Emanuel Hertz. (Viking, $5). Published a week ago yesterday.

Intensely interesting for Lincoln enthusiasts is this volume of material edited from the letters and papers of William H. Herndon. It provides for easy reference source material previously unavailable or scattered and difficult to find. It opens to view hidden Lincoln biographical material, purported to be unprintable and seriously damaging.

Readers who already know about the biographical controversies which have waged over Lincoln, Lincoln collectors, historians who wish to add to detail, however minute, to already established factual detail, will find "The Hidden Lincoln" a literary mine. The publishers call this volume "the most important book on Lincoln since 1889." Whether their enthusiasm is warranted or not will have to be, and can be, determined only by the experts in historiography.

To the general reader, the significance of the individual items in the mass of documentary evidence is blurred by the fact that he doesn't know the outlines which they ornament or clarify, and Mr. Hertz has not annotated his excellent material for the untutored. But the unspecialized reader will be interested by this first-hand contact with the favorite American historical hero.

William H. Herndon, Lincoln's life-time devotee, probably knew more about his law partner before and after Lincoln's death than any one then, or since then. After Lincoln's death he spent years and all his meager money tracking down every one who had known his hero, setting forth their words as record. Some of his theories about Lincoln's birth being illegitimate and his marriage psychologically unexplainable and evidence pointing to Lincoln's having suffered from syphilis brought a storm of national opposition.

The colossal contemporaneous failure of his own biography of Lincoln after Peter him from continuing his search for what he believed the truth about Lincoln. Mr. Hertz here presents previously unpublished Herndon letters and annotations.

Gives New Appraisal of Louisa May Alcott.

"Louisa May Alcott," by Katharine Anthony. (Knopf, $3). Published last Monday.

"Perhaps it ['Little Women'] is as well known as would be any one of Shakespeare's plays," says Katharine Anthony in discussing the tremendous popularity of Louisa May Alcott. And it is as a writer of universal appeal that Miss Anthony views her subject. She feels that critics have neglected Louisa May Alcott as a serious novelist in thinking of her only as a writer of books for children, and she draws an interesting (if brief) parallel between the younger Henry James and Louisa Alcott, who "stood close together at the beginning of their careers, and the mutual influence was perhaps stronger than any one realizes."

But this is no critical biography of "Jo." It retells in its details the life which all of us know so well from its fictionalization in the beloved "Alcott" books. It goes into more detail than the few previous lives have done in describing Louisa's European idyll with Laddias Wisniewski. Since it is intended for adults, not children, it delves more deeply into the springs of her actions and points more exactly the translations of her own emotions into her books. It more minutely identifies the originals of some of her characters, and makes plain how every one of them, major as well as minor, came directly out of life.

The relationship between Bronson Alcott, his wife, and Mr. Lane is more frankly discussed than in other biographies of the members of that strange family. The Alcott family itself emerges from these pages an Swinerton Shows His Art as a Story Teller.

"Harvest Comedy," by Frank Swinerton. (Doubleday-Doran, $2.50). Published last Friday.

"Harvest Comedy" is written in the manner of a Victorian novel, leisurely paced, covering a lifetime chronologically almost as detailed as a Dickens tale, with right and wrong taking devious but sure paths to their goals of happiness or disaster. It tells the story of three elderly men who walk on the promenade at Brighton, "alone, and as they pass they give no sign of recognition," but whose lives "have astonishingly crossed at different points during the last fifty years, and each has been consciously or unconsciously affected by the fate of the others in that period."

The three are boys at the fifty years begin to unfold their intricate annals. All live in an English village, one a half-orphan whose father was found shot to death, another the bullying son of a bullying mother and a father soon to die mysteriously, and the third the son of the village organist, who inherited will, and a certain ruthlessness. Fate turned and twisted the lives of the three into intricate interwoven patterns.

Frank Swinerton has written a modern novel in the pattern of the lives of his characters, and therein lies his supreme skill, for the book is in their exact mood and tense. The characters are—despite the world war, despite the postwar upheaval, despite economic modernity—essentially Victorian, and in the manner of their own spiritual period Mr. Swinerton has pictured them.

"Harvest Comedy" comes to us from England where it has been a best seller continuously since its publication.

Brief, probably doomed to small circulation, William G. Sewell's book about a little Christian university in the heart of China offers an important sidelight on China, along with its simple and appealing story of a very different side of the new China.

Sewell makes real to the occidental mind the niceties of Chinese politeness and diplomacy in little things. The subtle meaning is more important than the direct statement. It is strange, then, that Chiang, who barks at his fellow workers, is blunt in his command, should have remained so long a strange figure, not only to foreigners but to many Chinese as well? Chiang is a modern Chinese. He thinks in a modern way, and although he observes many of the old customs, it is as a concession to the past to enhance the present.

Three Volumes
Lift Veil from Life of Chiang

BY WILL DAVIDSON.

"Strong Man of China," by Robert Berkov. (Houghton Mifflin, $3).

"First Act in China," by John M. Bertram. (Viking, $3).

"China Through a College Window," by William G. Sewell. (Friendship Press, $1).

These three books open the doors to many of Chiang Kai-shek's private sanctuaries. They reveal a miscellany of personal belongings—school books, debtor's notes, stock market receipts, military orders, a minor clan of personal family skeletons. They also reveal a very human person. Robert Berkov has compiled in "Strong Man of China" a biography of Chiang Kai-shek that is must reading for those who attempt to follow the drama of far eastern affairs.

There are four dates of major importance in Chiang's life—his birth, Oct. 31, 1887; the occasion in 1910 of his conversion to Dr. Sun Yat-sen's revolution; Dec. 1, 1927, when he married his second legal wife, American educated Soong Mei-ling, and Dec. 12, 1936, the date of the amazing kidnapping episode in Sianfu.

Around these four dates Berkov winds a story on the rise to power of a middle class Chinese with a definitely stubborn and revolutionary spirit—an opportunist who could send 9,100 of his 10,000 men to death to accomplish a fairly unimportant victory and fortify his position as a leader. Yet Berkov's book is sympathetic to Chiang. His ruthlessness was born of necessity, the necessity of welding a melange of clanish, past worshiping peasants into a nation.

Although both Berkov and Edgar Snow, author of "Red Star Over China," recently reviewed on this page, devote considerable space to the kidnapping. It is left to John Bertram, a young Australian, to tell the story in revealing thoroughness.

Picture Chiang shivering on a northwest China mountainside, his bare feet bleeding from stone lacerations, his back wrenched from a fall when the feeling generalissimo hastily ordered a wall in an attempted escape from would-be kidnappers. . . . Picture Chiang pleading with a young officer to shoot and get it over. . . . Picture the equal of Sun Yat-sen riding pickaback down the mountain, his lean legs sticking out from a thin nightgown, his teeth chattering from cold, fright and anger.

Picture this, and you get an idea of Bertram's book. It is an entertaining adventure yarn with all the documented weight of an important historical manuscript. It reveals that Chiang, who for ten years had honestly regarded the communists as his worst immediate enemies, had to be kidnapped by his own trusted marshal, Chang Hsueh-ling, before he could be convinced that Japan was the common enemy.

Brief, probably doomed to small circulation, William G. Sewell's book about a little Christian university in the heart of China offers an important sidelight on China, along with its simple and appealing story of a very different side of the new China.

Sewell makes real to the occidental mind the niceties of Chinese politeness and diplomacy in little things. The subtle meaning is more important than the direct statement. A Well Told Biography of Byzantine Emperors.

"Theodora," by Rene Kraus. (Doubleday-Doran, $3).

It was Justinian, emperor of Byzantium, who was surnamed The Great, but in this biography the author believes that the title would have been more fitting for Theodora, his empress. For Theodora—attractive, brilliant, ruthless, and cruel, too—was one of the great women of history.

From circus girl and courtesan—the lowest castles in the decadent Byzantine civilization of the early sixth century—she rose by her wits and personal allure to the position of empress. She guided Justinian through affairs of state and religion, loving him but always feeling herself to be the person of destiny.

This well written book translated from the German is not sparing of the meanness of Theodora's character. She exterminated her enemies through cunning handling of her husband's moods. Her duel to a finish with John of Cappadocia, financial wizard and liberator, was one of her most important triumphs. S. M. K.

Military Man Writes of Gen. von Steuben.

"Gen. von Steuben," by John M. Palmer. (Yale University Press, $4).

When one military man with a flair for writing takes eight years to unearth the life of another the result is likely to make good reading—providing the subject had a foothold on fame. Certainly the crack German soldier who joined Washington and his dispirited army at Valley Forge earned a place in American history books, but Brig. Gen. John McAuley Palmer, U. S. A., retired, is not ready to accord him the rank and title which he accorded himself.

Von Steuben was penniless and out of a job when Benjamin Franklin picked him up in Europe and hired him to aid Washington. He bore the title of baron, but this was spurious, and added one just as imposing—Lieutenant general in the army of Frederick the Great. Actually he had been only a captain.

But Von Steuben was an excellent drillmaster and a rigid but fair disciplinarian. His work in correcting defects he found in visits to every military organization in the American army was of immense value, and Washington frequently acknowledged it.

Gen. Palmer dedicates his book to the memory of the late Dr. Otto L. Schmidt and also acknowledges aid from Dr. Louis E. Schmidt, and two other Chicagoans, Albert J. Lasker and Edgar J. Uihlein. It is a scholarly work and a fine addition to early Americana. P. W.

Mamie Mullins Has Chief Role in Jolly Opera

BY EDWARD BARRY.

Mamie Mullins is the principal character of "Angelique," the one act French musical farce produced at the Auditorium theater last night by the Salzburg Opera guild.

You would not immediately recognize the flowery gown of the comedienne, for she masquerades under the name of Angelique and is infinitely prettier than her prototype. But when it comes to disciplining the men—and it seems to come to just that every three minutes or so—all superficial differences between Mamie and Angelique are forgotten.

The little opera tells the story of the much put upon husband who, better advised than Uncle Willie, endeavors to sell his wife at a high price and thus make an honest profit on the years of turmoil which he has endured with her. Three gullible tourists buy her in turn, but each comes back in battered shape and returns the merchandise. Even the devil himself, after a brief residence with her in hell, emerges with a handbagged tail and a new stock of wisdom.

The farce is set to shrill, nervous music of Jacques Ibert and is played against the garish provincial settings of Eugen Schulz-Breiden.

The sparkling libretto offers the composer opportunities to caricature Italian operatic music and the sinuous rhythms of the orient. These the devilishly clever Ibert exploits with hilarious effect. For this and other reasons "Angelique" kept the house alternating between giggles and full laughter throughout its course, and drew a man-sized ovation at the final curtain.

"Angelique" was superlatively performed, a statement which is true of everything the Salzburg guild has offered us this week. The engagement ends today with an afternoon repetition of Mozart's "Così fan tutte" and an evening mounting of Monteverdi's "Coronation of Poppea." The latter opera, approximately 300 years old, has never been produced in Chicago.

Looking at Hollywood By Ed Sullivan

Take the Stand, Jack Benny

Hollywood, Cal., Feb. 18.—(P)—You come from Waukegan, Ill., of course?

A.—I spent all but two weeks of the first seventeen years of my life there.

Q.—Two weeks out of seventeen years is fairly unimportant, Jack.

A.—They were important to me, Edward. You see, I was born in a Chicago hospital and my mother didn't take me back to Waukegan until I was 2 weeks old.

Q.—So you're really a city slicker from Chicago?

A.—No, apart from the accident of being born there, I'm a Waukegan kid. Did you know that I played on the Waukegan High school football team with Bob O'Farrell, the big league catcher? He went into baseball; I went into the orchestra pit at the Barrison theater, back home, and played a violin.

Q.—Then your job as a pit orchestra violinist was your first stage connection?

A.—Uh-huh, and it led to my debut in vaudeville. The pianist in the orchestra, Miss Salisbury, took me into vaudeville with her as the act of Salisbury and Benny. I'll never forget the first time we appeared on the stage at Racine, Wis. But I scared the audience more than they scared me. I fiddled while they burned.

Q.—How long did you remain with Miss Salisbury, Nero?

A.—For about two years and a half. Then Lyman Wood and myself teamed up for about three years and a half. We worked ourselves up to $250 a week and in the smaller towns, we really kind of them. We were so terrific that they booked us into the famous Palace theater, at New York, sight unseen.

Q.—What happened?

A.—We flopped so badly at the Palace that we almost lost every other week we had booked. That was my first experience with Broadway—and I laid an egg.

Q.—Up to then you played the violin. How did you become a comedian?

I mean, where was it that you first started talking on the stage?

A.—While I was serving at the Great Lakes Naval Training station, during the war. We put on a big show, "The Great Lakes Revue," and I played the part of a comic orderly. That was the first time I ever spoke on a stage. Ben Piazza, now at Paramount, staged the show, and Harry Fender, one of the gobs, was so good in it that Ziegfeld took him to New York for the "Follies." The pianist was Zez Confrey, who later wrote "Kitten on the Keys."

Q.—It was the success of your comedy act, then, as a Great Lakes sailor, that really led to what you are today?

A.—Definitely. I've often wondered what would have happened if Zez Confrey had received his discharge from the navy at the same time as I got out. We had planned to go into vaudeville as a team as a violin and piano act. You know he was sensational on a piano. But he didn't get his discharge, so I started out as a single act. My first date was at Springfield, Ill. I played the violin and told a few jokes. From then on, I kept adding jokes and cutting down the violin solos.

Q.—When did you get married to Mary?

A.—Twelve years ago, in Chicago, while I was playing there in a Shubert show, "Great Temptations." I'd known her sister, Babe Marx, in vaudeville and it was through Babe that I met Mary.

Q.—You said, Jack, that in your first appearance at the Palace you laid an egg, flopped. Did that often happen to you?

A.—Not often, but often enough. At the Academy of Music I walked out on the stage and said pleasantly: "Hello, everybody." In return I got the most explosive raspberry I've ever heard. So I said: "Good-by, everybody," walked off the stage, and kept on walking until I got home.

Q.—There are certain theaters and certain cities that are tougher than others, isn't that so?

A.—Yes. All actors will agree to that. Syracuse, N. Y., was supposed to be tough, but I always did well there. Kansas City, Mo., and Washington, D. C., always were tough audiences. People always seemed to enjoy the shows, but they didn't applaud.

Q.—What was your first radio program?

A.—The first time I ever appeared on the radio was on your program in New York, Ed. How many of us did you start on that program at Columbia?

Q.—I'm interviewing you, Mr. K.

belsky. Did you ever flop on radio?

A.—One sponsor got rid of me because he didn't think I was high class enough. He said that organ music was more suited to his product, than comedy. I told him that he might be right, but advised him not to try to sell pink automobiles when the people wanted to buy black and blue or brown cars. He said: "That's the kind of comedy I don't like."

Q.—What programs have won the greatest response for you, Jack?

A.—On our own program, the "Emerson Jones" broadcast, but I personally preferred "Brewster's Millions" when we did a guest-appearance.

Q.—It's a tough job, making people laugh, isn't it?

A.—Sometimes I'm inclined to think that it's the toughest in the world. Say, these gray hairs on my head aren't an early snowfall.

Q.—How long does it take to prepare a 30 minute program?

A.—I get together with my writers [I have two of them] the early part of the week. We discuss certain ideas and start putting them down on paper. But you never can tell about comedy. Two weeks ago we outlined what the three of us agreed was a sock program. At the rehearsal Saturday night the lines that seemed so hilarious meant nothing when spoken. We had to rip out two complete spots and rewrite them. That's where gray hairs come from. After a season of radio, Ed, I'm all washed up—tired, nervous, completely fagged out. We get big money, surely, but I sometimes wonder whether or not the strain is worth it. The nervous tension is really brutal.

By Mae Tinee.

Good Morning!

"The Goldwyn Follies," all in technicolor, is far above the average run of revues in the matter of heart appeal. You DO find yourself so intensely interested in the story characters!

The stressing of the search for a "human slant" in the narrative itself has the effect of striking a human note in the heart of the observer.

Meet, then, Adolphe Menjou as a producer whose productions have failed to ring the bell with audiences because they have failed to ring true.

While on location with one of his companies near a small town, Merila overhears a conversation between two girls who are watching a scene being shot.

The good sense revealed by Hazel Dawes' criticism of scene and dialog gives Merila an idea. . . . He will take Hazel to Hollywood. . . . She shall become his backstage adviser—power behind the throne, as it were.

Nobody but Merila shall know that a still, small sensible voice is in his listening ear. . . .

Their platonic relationship ripens into love on Merila's part. But Hazel sees her heart to a lesser, who, having failed to get into pictures, makes a living running a hamburger wagon. . . . Eventually the fair lady betters production and has everybody around her doing the "human thing." . . .

The picture gently kids the film industry, but there's not a bit of acid in the fun. . . . Proceedings are enlivened by two infrequent appearances of Charlie McCarthy, the dervish like nonsense of the Rita Brothers and some sweet songs sweetly sung by Kenny Baker. . . .

Andrea Leeds is perfectly delightful as Hazel. Adolphe Menjou is satiny smooth as Merila. The rest of the players are tops.

The story, clean as a whistle, is from the pen of Ben Hecht.

There are some effective ensemble numbers, some laughs, quite a bit of suspense, and some right smart dialog. The piece, of course, is lavishly staged and costumed.

It's long, but this time you don't mind a bit.

See you tomorrow.

Hersholt in Movies 25 Years with Only 3 Payless Pay Days

Hollywood, Cal., Feb. 18.—(P)—Jean Hersholt came to Hollywood 25 years ago. He had $50 and high hopes. The hopes were almost diminished, and so was his fortune, before he got his first movie job six weeks after his arrival.

But since March 7, 1913, the day he started work, Hersholt has failed to receive a weekly pay check only three times. He has been under contract to some studio for all of the quarter century, except four months, when he "freelanced." It was during this period that he laid off for three weeks.

When Hersholt started to work—a handsome Dane of 27 who had come to this country to give "recitations," he played cowboy and Indian in the morning and was the hero in the afternoons. He often was in as many as seven films at one time.

GUNHAMMERED GOLD

By Luke Short

(Copyright, 1938, by Frederick Dilly Gilman.)

STORY

McCandless, who framed Poco St. Vrain and made him an outlaw, owed a gold mine on a mountain peak. Two insurance agents, sent to meet at the mine and bring down the gold, are murdered by two different bands of outlaws. Two-way diamond, leader of one band, persuades Poco to pass as one of the agents and get the gold. At the mountain camp Poco finds Harry Cardowan, killer gunman, posing as the other agent. They share not five each other away to observe, the mine manager, and his lovely daughter, Harry Cardowan grows Poco off the gold and takes the gold. He turns over to two-way Poco as a prospector they are given an army escort to deliver the mine. Meanwhile Harry keeps away from the mine. Poco is arrested by Sheriff Hogan on McCandless' order. Poco saves the life of a stranger, Van, whom Hogan tries to hire to kill Poco. Van helps Poco capture Two Way and Cardowan and put them in jail. Poco brings McCandless to the jail by tricking them and McCandless' Poco tells them to tell him they put the gold on a stagecoach. Poco rides off after the coach. The outlaws capture Van and rain their freedom. At McCandless' hotel Cardowan recognizes Kate Shurne. Two Way leaves him to prevent Kate from getting to McCandless. Cardowan tells the hotel clerk that he has the gold which was at the coach. Meanwhile Two Way was McCandless' and double-crossed Cardowan. He promises to lead a posse to St. Vrain and the gold, while Cardowan rides off with Kate and the gold. Harry Cardowan is on the road. When they find no gold, McCandless accuses Two Way of double-crossing him. In an exchange of gunfire both are killed.

INSTALLMENT XXX. A LEADERLESS MOB.

Poco saw the blunt nose of a shotgun leveled at him and he recognized that growing madness which drives a mob to do insane things. Singly these men would not have spoken, but they were a mob now, and their leader, the man who cowed them, was dead.

"Who are you, there with the green?" Poco drawled. For answer, there was a husky laugh.

"You'll never know, hard-case," the man said. "Put that gun down, Hank!" a man ordered from deep in the crowd. Just a minute," Hank said. "I may have to blow it out of him."

Poco considered a moment. He knew the man in this posse were divided, but it was the men in front, men like Hank, who could do the harm before the others made reason rule. The only thing left, then, the only thing that would satisfy these men suddenly liberated from a tyrant, was the gold.

Poco said, "I know where the gold is. I'll make a deal with you. I take you to the gold and you let me ride off."

And now a rider pushed his way through the crowd up to Hank and knocked the shotgun down.

"All right, St. Vrain," this man said. "It's a bargain. Maybe we'll get some of that back pay now. Maybe I'll make up for the starvation grub, the twenty hour days and the drink money wages that old job gave us. Get down off that stage, and drop those guns before you come."

Harry, from the seat, said to Poco in a low voice, "Know where it is, Poco?"

"I know where it was," Poco answered grimly.

"Want to try a getaway?"

"Huh-uh. Thanks, Harry."

Under the posse's guns, to the company of Harry's muttered profanity, Poco shrank down at the stage and was searched for hideouts. A man went for his horse, while others tied McCandless and Two Way's limp bodies on their horses. Poco felt no emotion at the thought of McCandless' death. It had to come sooner or later, and now it was done.

The stage was ordered on, and Poco watched it drive off.

In a few more minutes they were ready to leave. Poco was tied on his horse, placed in the middle of the posse, and they started off. Around daylight, just as the street was grayed out of its shadow, the cavalcade reached Rinton.

Hank said, "Where to?"

"The hotel," Poco said, and yawned.

They dismounted and stomped up the steps, Poco in the lead. He hoped the gold would not be there. The clerk roused sleepily from a cot in the back office and came out to the desk, his eyes widening at the sight of this crew of grimaced men.

Poco said, "A couple of rannies ordered some freight sent out on the night stage south. The driver said it was dumped off here. Where is it?"

"Gone," the clerk said bluntly. "One of the partners, the long-drawing gent, took it."

"When?"

"Close to midnight."

Poco turned to confront the men and shrugged. "Any of you know who that long drawing gent was?"

"Who?" Hank asked.

"Espey Cardowan," Poco said quietly. He turned to the staring clerk.

"How'd he get it out?"

"I helped him load it on a buckboard. I never knew it was that killer."

Poco smiled crookedly and turned to Hank. "Cardowan runs with about twenty men," he drawled quietly. "They were likely waiting outside town. Any of you hard-cases feel like riding them down and taking it away from them?"

Then Hank started to curse him with blistering mouth-filling oaths. Poco looked bored. He leaned against the counter, listening idly to the muttering of the posse, looking at the register. Suddenly, he bent down to examine a name, then straightened up and said swiftly to the clerk, "Who is Kate Shayne? Pretty, light haired, got eyes that are mighty blue?"

"That's her," the clerk said absently. "She was registered here, but she disappeared around midnight."

Poco swallowed and stared at him. Hank had quit cursing now, looking at him. "What time did you say Cardowan left?"

"Close to midnight."

Poco felt a cold flush of panic creeping through his veins. He said softly, "Midnight. Did Cardowan ever hear this Kate Shayne?"

The clerk said, "He said so."

And then Poco turned away, sick. Cardowan had her, of course. He had to take her or else she would give him away, and the thought of that clean, beautiful girl in Cardowan's hands made Poco rage. He beat down his anger into some semblance of control, and drawled to Hank, "Trot along, Big Wind. The gold's gone for good."

Hank swung the shotgun up pointing at Poco's belly.

"Is it?" he asked softly. "You know where Cardowan is. You're going to take us to him?"

Poco said, "No."

Hank bowed the shotgun higher. "If I was you, I'd hate to get a hole blown through my belly just because I acted like a mule."

"No," Poco said quietly, menacingly. "I don't know where he is. I'm sleepy."

"You'll be—"

And then a voice from the stairs cut in and took up Hank's unfinished sentence with, "Tried by a jury and sentenced."

Poco turned and looked at the stairs. Van, thumbs rammed in his belt, stood regarding the crowd, his face grim, his jaw outstuck.

He came down the few steps and walked over to Poco, saying to Hank, "Put up that greener."

Hank swiveled it to him now. "Who the hell are you, Mister?"

"I said, 'Put it up.'"

"And I said stand still or I'll make you!"

Van and Hank glared at each other. Poco, looking at them, knew that Van's bluff wouldn't work.

"Now get the hell out of here while you still can!" Hank said curtly. Van replied, "I'm going to reach in my shirt pocket for something, fellas. If you're wise, you won't shoot until you see it."

He reached up slowly to his shirt pocket, drew forth a metal badge and handed it to Hank.

Hank read aloud, "United States Marshal."

PROBLEMS MADE EASY

To Cure Mate of Habit Use Gentle Tactics

BY DORIS BLAKE.

(Copyright, 1938, by The Chicago Tribune.)

Ever since he met the girl who now is his wife and mother of their son, he has pleaded with her not to smoke.

"It isn't that I am old-fashioned," he argues. "I just think that a woman should not smoke. It isn't necessary. We have a son a year and a half old and I am going to try to train him never to smoke. In my wife's case I know she can get along without it."

"Wouldn't you think a woman would try to understand the attitude of her husband?"

"UNHAPPY MATE."

You ask what would he advise? Well, we'd advise you to stop making the cigarette a burning an issue (no pun intended). She is keeping on smoking for some reason that she thinks is good. You may not agree with the reason and neither might we. But you ought to know, as a married man, that if you want to reform a wife of any annoying habit, the way to go about it is not to make it a constant issue, not to make it the subject of a quarrel.

There are other ways of getting around the feminine creature than by trying to nag her into reform. Women are putty in the hands of men with the right technique. But, my goodness, how they'll bridle when they see their man buckling on dictator armor.

Hastings Return from Son's Wedding.

Mr. and Mrs. Rolland T. R. Hastings have returned to Highland Park from San Francisco, where the wedding of their son, Rolland Hastings Jr., and Miss Lillian Mason Sperry took place on Feb. 5. The couple had planned to be married in the spring, but because of the illness of the bride's mother, Mrs. John Sperry, the wedding date was advanced.

Only the two families were present at the ceremony which was performed at noon at the home of Dr. and Mrs. Sperry. A breakfast followed. The bride was attended by her sisters, Mrs. S. L. Newman of Salt Lake City and Miss Anne Sperry.

Duval Dickey, who is a brother of Mrs. Irving Randall of Highland Park, was Mr. Hastings' best man. Mr. Hastings and his bride went to Carmel on their wedding trip, and will be at home next week in San Francisco.

The bridegroom's sister, Miss Lydia Hastings, did not go west for the wedding. She has been active on the junior prom committee at Vassar. Miss Hastings probably will spend the Easter holidays visiting the gardens in Virginia and traveling in the east.

Poker Face Can Be Valued Aid to Good Parent

BY GLADYS HUNTINGTON BEVANS
(Copyright, 1938; By The Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Syndicate, Inc.)

Are you shockproof? Can you keep a "dead pan"? Even if you're not a reincarnation of a Mississippi gambler on a river boat, have you got a poker face? Can you hear your son's or daughter's recounting of anything under the sun without batting an eye?

If you can, you have one of the first requirements for being a father or a mother, particularly to your eighties and tens and twenties, and to your teen age boys and girls. This control over your expression, even if not over your emotions, is a valuable asset to the mother and father who not only want to be good friends with their children, but want to know all about them.

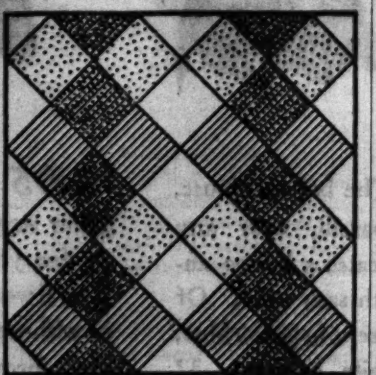

And by that I don't mean know all about them in the sense of prying into their actions away from home, their companions, and even their thoughts. I mean know all about them as they are, and interested in their life, because it is in this kind of knowledge that you often find out what they are really like, and what influences and experiences are brought to bear upon them.

A feeling of freedom with you; a feeling that you will not be horrified or too amazed; or, blame, or sit in judgment; or be shocked at what isn't to them at all shocking will open you to real confidences from your son or daughter—confidences that involve not only external acts, but confidences that are often very revealing of his or her inner life.

Brotherhood Days to Be Observed This Week-end

Today and tomorrow will be observed as Brotherhood days with exchanges of greetings between Catholics, Protestants, and Jews. The observances are sponsored by the National conference of Jews and Christians throughout the country. Mayor Kelly and Gov. Horner have issued statements urging general observance of the days. Leaders of the Chicago round table include Judge John P. McGorty, Gen. Charles G. Dawes, Fred W. Sargent, and Albert D. Lasker.

Color Choice Is Major Factor in Beauty of Quilt

Tinted Chains.

BY NANCY CABOT.
"Tinted Chains" is one of the simple pieced designs which depend a great deal upon the choice of colors to make up the pattern. The block is composed of square and triangular patches, and their arrangement in the pastel tones, and the manner in which the blocks are set, pastel pinks and blues are used, and a shade of purple which is a blend of the pink and blue, in combination with white, creates a coverlet that is charming and simple and most attractive for any young girl's room.

ENGAGEMENT

Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Cameron of Evanston announced the engagement of their daughter, Jean, to Clyde Smith, also of Evanston, at a party at the Edgewater Beach hotel last night. Miss Cameron was graduated from Northwestern university. Mr. Smith, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Smith of Mason City, Ia., attended the University of Minnesota and was graduated from the University of Iowa. The wedding will take place in late May or early June.

Deems Taylor, in "Of Men and Music": "Many modernist composers remind me of a cook who should suddenly tire of doing things with the same old flour and salt and pepper and beans and lamb chops, and should forthwith proceed to invent dishes composed of benzine, shavings, quinine, oyster shells, and crank case lubricant."

Cookery proverbs: A sharp stomach maketh short devotion. . . . Enough's as good as a feast to one that's not a beast. . . . All should profit by the cook except the apothecary.

Be extravagant in the use of milk and orange juice every day, is the advice of nutritionists. Better general health, better teeth will be the results. . . . All fried foods and foods containing a large quantity of fat and sugar should be omitted from the diet of young children, according to pediatricians. Pastries, rich cakes and puddings, rich sauces and gravies come under this classification. Highly spiced foods also should be omitted.

Roquefort cheese is the product of accident. Some time preceding the year 1070 a shepherd tending his flock near the caves of Roquefort, France, left his barley bread and sheep's milk cheese in the coolness of a cavern until he should want it. A wandering flock and a sudden storm drove him far away, and it was two weeks before he returned to see whether or not his lunch was still there. He found the bread covered with black mold, the cheese with a delicate green one. He sampled the cheese and found it delightful to his tongue. Ever since that time Roquefort has been ripened in the same caves by the same natural processes.

New style meat patties: Season ground beef with salt and pepper and shape into thin patties, two for each serving. Make a bread dressing, using plenty of butter, and pile on top of half the patties. Place the others on top and pinch edges together. Broil or panbroil until the meat is done. M-M-M, but they're good!

Vitamin D now is being added to bread. Each pound loaf of "irradiated" bread contains the vitamin equivalent of 2 1/2 quarts of vitamin D milk. Who cares now when the sun doesn't shine?

Brillat-Savarin, famous gourmet (born 1755) was dining in a French hotel. Following the cook to the kitchen, as was his custom, he observed four large turkeys being roasted. Said he: "I'll have one of those for my dinner." Said the cook in effect: "O no, you won't! These were ordered by a solitary gentleman who is dining upstairs."

Curious about a man who could eat four turkeys by himself Brillat-Savarin marched upstairs to have a look at the solitary gentleman. He was startled to face his own son, who looked dismayed and complained sadly. "When I dine with you, you eat up all the tidbits. I was resolved to enjoy myself for once in my life!"

"Dear Mr. Culbertson: Just in case you and other stay-at-homes feel that flying shrapnel and other unpleasantnesses do not constitute a good setting for a serious bridge game, I am sending you the enclosed hand which recently was played here in Shanghai. Incidentally, our contract games were the bright particular star in a decidedly overcast sky, when the aforesaid unpleasantness recently reached its height.

DENIES SENILITY CHARGE IN SUIT OVER 6 MILLION

Children of Mrs. Hughes
Call Her Gay, Witty.

Mrs. Mary Elizabeth Hughes was no doddering great-grandmother, sunken in senility, but a charming and vivacious woman. Despite her age she was eagerly alive to the news of the day, keenly interested in travel and her family's welfare, a witty and brilliant conversationalist, usually the center of any gathering.

This picture was presented yesterday to a jury in the Superior court by several of her children and grandchildren. They testified in defense of a suit to set aside her will brought by one of her four sons, Frank Hughes, of Squirrel Island, Me. The case is expected to be in the hands of the jury tonight.

Physicians Testify for Plaintiff. An array of nurses and physicians testified to support his charge that Mrs. Hughes was mentally incompetent in 1930 when she made her will, making a son, Edmond, of Bismarck, N. D., her principal beneficiary. Mrs. Hughes died in Chicago in 1935 at the age of 87.

She was the widow of Alexander Hughes, former attorney general of North Dakota, and founder of a chain of utilities in the northwest. If successful in setting aside the will, which concerns a small estate, Frank Hughes' suit will ask an accounting from Edmond, alleging that most of the $6,000,000 realized from the sale of the utilities belongs in his mother's estate.

At the time when the state of her mind was questioned, said Mrs. Atherton Richards, "When ever the boys came for dinner she would put on a little more powder and a pretty dress and be gay with them."

Another son, George A., of Riverside, president of the Edison General Electric Appliance company, told of his mother's solicitude for her sons when she transferred much of her property to them before she died. He also recalled a family party in 1930, when she danced with him to jazz music from the radio, and later sang and played old songs on the piano.

Grandsons Add Their Views. The grandsons who testified were Alexander and Frank, sons of William V. Hughes of Evanston, a retired capitalist. They told of other evenings at Mrs. Hughes' home in Minneapolis, Minn.

"Samuel Van Sleet, former governor of Minnesota, was there one night," said Alexander. "They both enjoyed the humor when he chafed grandmother about her boy friend. She took much enjoyment in kidding me about my girl at that time."

ROSS KIDNAPER'S FAMILY RETAINS KING AS COUNSEL

Attorney John B. King will represent the family of John Henry Seadlund, confessed kidnaper and slayer of Charles S. Ross, in his trial which is tentatively set for March 21. This was announced yesterday after King had conferred with Federal Judge John P. Barnes and United States District Attorney Michael L. Igoe. Seadlund himself will continue to be represented by Attorneys Floyd E. Thompson and Frederic Burnham, who were appointed by the court. It is expected that Attorney King will sit at the trial. Seadlund's arraignment has been set for Feb. 28.

ADAMICK WINS DECISION OVER HARRY THOMAS

But Fails to Startle
New York Fans.

New York, Feb. 18.—[Special.]—The highly touted Jimmy Adamick of Detroit scored a ten round decision over Harry Thomas of Chicago in the Madison Square Garden tonight. Though Jimmy won most of the early rounds, he failed to live up to the terrifying advance notices which had been circulated about him and had just enough left to win.

The judges and Referee Arthur Donovan gave a unanimous vote to Adamick, Judge Forbes calling it seven and three; Lecon scoring it five, four, and one even, while Donovan tabulated seven rounds for Jimmy against three for Thomas.

6,854 See Bout.

A crowd of 6,854 paid $16,069.71 to see the bout.

It was not a particularly thrilling fight. There were no knockdowns, though both boys were staggered occasionally after taking each other's Sunday punches.

Thomas, with nothing more than a good left jab to the mouth, started very slowly and let Adamick hook his head off. After dodging the first round to the Detroiters, Thomas came back with an assortment of lefts and rights to Jimmy's body to win the third. He landed a slightly low punch, however, and Donovan took the round away from him and awarded it to Adamick.

Adamick took the fourth round easily, doing all the forcing and scoring cleanly with his left to Harry's mouth.

Thomas Gets Going.

Then Harry opened up briefly and took the fifth, sixth, and seventh. In the fifth he got off to a good start, driving Jimmy around the ring with some good left hooks to the head followed by hard overhand right smashes which bounced off James' jaw. In the sixth there was not much activity, but Thomas landed the cleaner punches to earn a clear advantage. Thomas continued to outscore Jimmy from in close and outscored him in the clinches to gain the seventh.

Adamick almost closed Harry's right eye as the eighth started, but Thomas refused to break ground, and the boys traded good lefts and rights to the face for most of the round.

Adamick Wins Ninth.

Adamick also took the ninth, hurting Harry with a hard right to the side of the head and driving him back with his good left hook. Thomas appeared tired in this round and when he went to his corner had a big swelling over his right eye.

The surprise of the night came in the tenth. Thomas came out like a 2 year old and actually started using his right hand, which might have been tied to his side for all the good it had done him up to this point.

He caught Adamick with it as the round started and followed with a left hook which sent the blood from Jimmy's nose streaming across his face. The Detroit boy backed up, bewildered, but Thomas was after him in a flash, falling away in a last desperate effort to pull the fight out of the fire.

Then James Recovers.

Thomas did more damage in this first minute of the final round than he did throughout the rest of the fight.

Jimmy recovered midway through the round and started hooking with his left as Harry tried. In the final minute of the fight both boys did more clinching than fighting, but Jimmy was very glad to get that final gong.

The crowd, impressed by Thomas' great finish, gave him a great hand and booed Adamick as he was led to the center of the ring to have his hand raised in victory.

Tiger Jack Fox Stops

This was the first knockout credited against Brouillard.

Fargo Wins 8 Round

DAY'S CUB NEWS: JURGES ACCEPTS, GRIMM ARRIVES

Migration to Catalina Starts Monday.

The signed contract of Billy Jurges, last of the Cub holdouts, arrived in Chicago yesterday. The shortstop's voluntary surrender in his not too vigorous holdout campaign came as a mild surprise.

He had expressed disappointment that the Cubs hadn't offered him a salary commensurate with that which the Giants reward their shortstop, Dick Bartell.

Jurges' capitulation was told to Manager Charley Grimm as Grimm arrived in Chicago from his Missouri farm to help Traveling Secretary Bob Lewis with details of the departure of the first Cub squad Monday night to the spring training camp on Catalina Island.

Nine Players in First Party.

Nine players will make up the first party. Manager Grimm said this group will get a week of conditioning before the regular training begins. The first workout on the Wrigley Island will be next Thursday. The second squad will leave Chicago Feb. 28. Four hour workouts will be held daily, Grimm said.

"We're going to hand out uniforms immediately upon our arrival at Catalina Thursday," said Grimm. "We'll arrive at noon and go right to work. There's plenty of work to be done."

Three Catchers Included.

The players who will leave Monday with club officials and newspaper men include Catchers Gabby Hartnett, Ken O'Dea, and Bob Garbaruk; Pitchers Roy Parmelee, Clyde Shoun, Clay Bryant, Al Epperly, and Walter Higbe; and Outfielder Conker Triplett. Two other players, Pitcher Bob Logan and Infielder Bob Mattick, will board the Cub special at Kansas City.

PAUL WANER ACCEPTS

Pittsburgh, Pa., Feb. 18.—(P)—Paul Waner declined for two and a half hours today about the terms of his 1938 contract with the Pittsburgh Pirates, then smilingly scrawled his signature to his thirteenth major league agreement. Waner, three times National league batting champion, said the new contract was entirely satisfactory.

MANCUSO SIGNS

Hot Springs, Ark., Feb. 18.—(P)—Manager Bill Terry and Catcher Gus Mancuso got together today. Mancuso signed a 1938 contract and the New York Giants' manager took down his for sale sign. Mancuso will continue as captain.

Terry announced four other Giants signed contracts today—Outfielder Wally Berger, Infielder Sam Leslie, and Pitchers Hal Schumacher and Dick Coffman. Berger mailed his contract in, the others signing here, where the Giants' pitchers and catchers are doing some early conditioning.

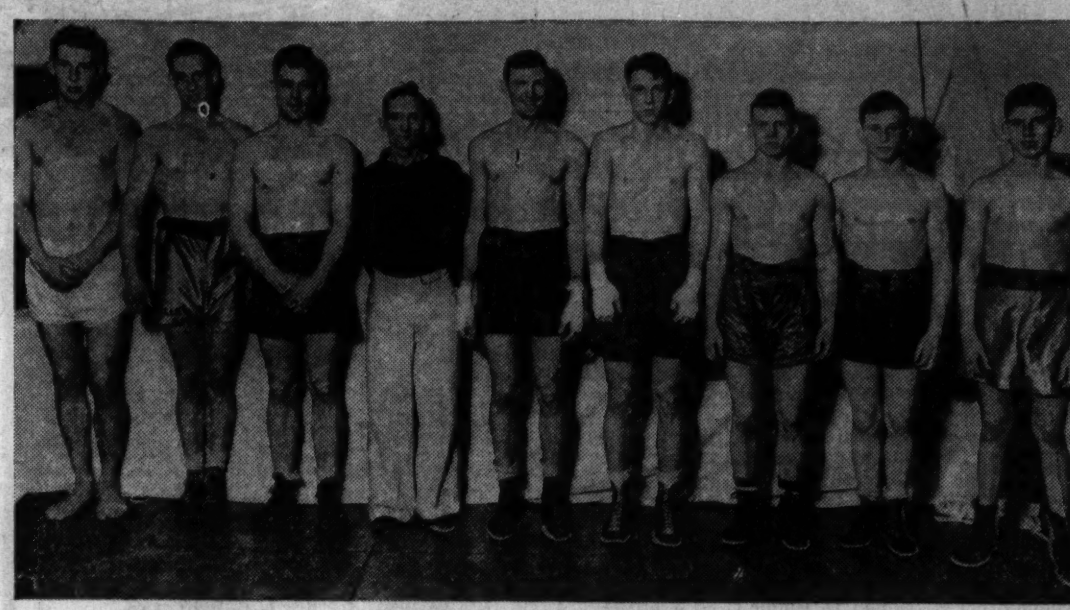

STEELE, BARTH READY FOR TITLE BATTLE TONIGHT

Cleveland, O., Feb. 18.—(P)—Middleweight Champion Freddy Steele of Tacoma, Wash., and Cleveland's Carmen Barth, former Olympic champion, completed their training today for their fifteen round championship bout tomorrow night, headlining a charity boxing show here.

Philadelphia, Pa., Feb. 18.—(P)—Temple University, conqueror of Stanford early in the season, tonight won the championship of the eastern intercollegiate basketball conference by beating Pittsburgh, 46 to 34, before a crowd of 6,000 at Convention hall.

N. U. Defends Big Ten Lead in Game with Indiana Tonight

Games Tonight

Indiana at Northwestern.
Purdue at Wisconsin.
Chicago at Iowa.
Minnesota at Michigan.
Ohio State at Illinois.

Changes in the Western conference basketball standings will occur tonight when the ten teams engage in competition. Crippled Northwestern, which must face Indiana in Patten gymnasium, is assured at least a tie for first place, however.

The Wildcats will face a Hoosier quintet which they defeated, 32 to 29, in an overtime game during the first semester and which has run alternately hot and cold all season. Northwestern, though seemingly handicapped by the permanent loss of one of last semester's regular guards, Bernard Davis, and temporary loss because of illness of his immediate understudy, Jim Currie, appears to be maintaining the same pace that gave it five victories in six conference games during the first half of the season.

It has Bob Voigts in the guard spot first vacated by Davis and then by Currie. Voigts helped the Wildcats beat Wisconsin by four points Monday.

Purdue can tie the Wildcats for the lead if it beats Wisconsin in Madison and Northwestern loses. The Boilermakers, who have won five games and lost two, also have their off nights. They experienced one last Monday, when, after taking a long lead over Ohio State in the first half, they collapsed during the second period and lost, 37 to 28.

Ohio State will threaten the lead if it beats Illinois in Champaign. The Buckeyes have won five of eight games and are now only a half game behind the second place Boilermakers. Illinois, which has two of eight contests, is likely to be improved, since its star, Pick Dehner, who became eligible last Friday, has had a full week of work with the team.

Minnesota at Michigan.

Michigan and Minnesota, each with four games won of seven played, will meet in a return game in Ann Arbor. The Wolverines won the first game, 31 to 16, but have been floundering lately. The Gophers have won their last four conference games.

Chicago's Maroons, who have lost their last 33 conference games, seven of them this season, will meet Iowa in a return game in Iowa City. The Maroons were beaten by the Hawkeyes, 42 to 23, last Saturday in the Midway fieldhouse. Iowa will pass the loser of the Michigan-Minnesota contest and move into the first division if it wins.

HEAVYWEIGHT—John Woods, Worth, Ill.

The Marigold Garden arena was jammed when the sectional championships were put at stake. A capacity crowd also greeted the finalists in the west side sectional tournament at the Park casino on Madison street. Within sight of their goal at last, the warriors from both sectional centers put on the finest battles that have been offered this year in Golden Gloves competition.

Filmore Stops Fidler.

One lad on the northwest side found it easy getting his hands on an open division crowd. This was Jesse Garcia, Mexican kid from the C. Y. O., who won the 118 pound title by default. All the others had to fight courageously to capture the honors.

An early knockout came in the open division title fighting; Andy Filmore of the Savoy Athletic club stopped Wayne Fidler of the C. Y. O. in the second round.

Paul Frazier, old time Golden Glove battler, almost performed a similar operation on Martin O'Grady of Trafton's gymnasium when he won the middleweight championship. He gave the Trafton protégé a fierce thumping but O'Grady weathered the storm until the final bell ended it.

Big Fellows Battle.

Two giants thrilled the crowd when they fought for the novice division heavyweight title. They were Albert Marys, 234, son of 2643 Southport avenue, and Eddie Gewarth, 5709 Henderson street. It was a slam bang slugfest match all the way. A rally in the last round sent the decision to Gewarth.

George Kontopolis, junior at Crane Tech High school, became the first west sectional qualifier when he won by default from Jerry Lewis, novice welterweight of 3426 West Grenshaw street. Lewis advanced by defeating William Lockett of Northwest gymnasium, but he suffered an injury which forced him out of the tournament.

Kontopolis Stops Oddo.

Kontopolis, 18 year old boxer from Franklin Park, scored a two round technical knockout over Sam Oddo, 4753 West Belmont avenue, in his semi-final bout. It was the Greek lad's tenth straight triumph. Three of these victories were achieved in the west side tryouts.

James Ross, Catholic Youth organization flyweight, who strutted from the ring after scoring an upset over Vito Scaleri in his first contest of the evening, was knocked out in his championship encounter with Henry Smith, who also is a member of the C. Y. O. The end came in the second round. Smith was down for a nine count in the opening session.

Trotter Beats Thomas.

John Trotter, Savoy Athletic club middleweight, chalked up a three round decision over Hiner Thomas.

DE LA SALLE FIVE DEALT FIRST LOSS BY LEO, 34 TO 20

Mt. Carmel Ties for South Section Junior Lead.

The De La Salle juniors, who went into last night's game the only undefeated team in the Catholic High School league basketball race, fell before Leo, 34 to 20, and slipped back into a tie for the lead in the south section. Mount Carmel shared first place after its 35 to 30 triumph over Catholic of Joliet. Each team has won seven games and lost one.

The St. George and St. Mel juniors won to remain in a tie for the north division lead, the former defeating Loyola, 38 to 21, and St. Mel turning back De Paul, 40 to 27. But the St. George seniors, with a chance to take the north lead, were beaten by Loyola, the pacesetter, 41 to 27, and skidded to third place. Leo's seniors whipped De La Salle, 43 to 23, to hold the south division lead.

Lane Juniors Triumph.

The Lane Tech juniors of the Chicago Public High School league assured themselves a tie for first place in the north section when they defeated Amundsen, 36 to 30, yesterday for their eighth victory. The defeat showed Amundsen into third place and admitted Lane to the championship playoffs. The Roosevelt juniors beat Waller, 48 to 33, to hold second place with seven victories and one defeat.

The York heavyweights were assured at least a tie for the West Suburban league championship when they routed Riverside, 54 to 28, last night at Elmhurst for their tenth victory in 11 games. The York lightweights also won to retain their lead with a record of eight victories and three losses.

Evanston Wins Title.

The Evanston heavyweights, beaten by Crane yesterday, became the Suburban league champions when Waukegan and New Trier were defeated. Proviso routed New Trier, 31 to 15, and Highland Park shared third place with Waukegan, 39 to 36. It was the fifth defeat for Evanston. Evanston has won eight and lost one in league competition, with three games remaining on its schedule.

MOON MULLINS—CHARITY BEGINS AT HOME

STARS OF TRACK RENEW DRIVE ON RECORDS TONIGHT

New York, Feb. 18.—[Special.]—The indoor track circus returns to Madison Square Garden tomorrow night for the New York A. C. games. The meet will bring out all the big winners of the year—Glenn Cunningham in the mile, Don Lash in the two mile, unbeaten Jimmy Herbert in the 500 yard run, Earle Meadows in the pole vault, Ben Johnson in the sprint, and Forrest Towns and Allan Tolmich in a renewal of their hurdlng duel.

Cunningham, enjoying one of his most successful seasons since coming east for the first time in 1933, will have Archie San Romani, his New York Curb Exchange teammate; Gene Venzke, New York A. C. veteran; Blaine Rideout of North Texas Teachers, and Ray Mahannah of Drake university as his opponents in the Baxter miller.

Cunningham has not been beaten at a mile this year. His time of 4:10 in winning the Hunter miller at Boston last week indicates he is ready to take a crack at his own world indoor mark of 4:06.4.

With Lash confining himself to one race, it wouldn't be surprising to see the Hoosier better or come close to his own world record of 8:58. He turned in the fastest race of the season in beating Norman Bright of San Francisco's Olympic club by a yard in 9:03.6 a week ago. Bright has entered the event along with Joe McCuskey, Floyd Lochner and George De George.

KENTUCKY PLANS REORGANIZATION OF ITS ATHLETICS

Lexington, Ky., Feb. 18.—[Special.]—President Frank L. Reorganization of the athletic department, Dr. McVey said, will include the establishment of a department of athletics within the university's school of arts and sciences and an extension of the powers of the athletic director.

No decision on a compromise of Wynne's contract, which still has two years to run, was made public by Dr. McVey, the members of the university council. He had received $7,500 a year.

NEW HIGHWAY PROGRAM WOULD AID ALL OF CITY

Kelly Indorses Plan for Radial Routes.

BY HAL ROUST.

A broad plan for superhighway development in Chicago was presented yesterday by Robert Kingery, manager of the Chicago Regional Planning association, to representatives of neighborhood civic organizations at a meeting in the Hotel La Salle. His proposal, which calls for a belt line around the central business district from which would radiate seven superhighways to various parts of the city, was endorsed by Mayor Kelly. The plan was prepared by a special committee headed by Kingery.

Kingery told the meeting that neither the proposed Congress street development nor any other single highway project should be constructed until a program is adopted for a system of modern pavements to serve all sections of the city. The parley was called by the Chicago Motor club.

Kingery told the meeting that neither the proposed Congress street development nor any other single highway project should be constructed until a program is adopted for a system of modern pavements to serve all sections of the city. The parley was called by the Chicago Motor club.

The committee did not recommend specific routes. It suggested that development from the belt line around the central business district superhighways should radiate to the rim of the built-up area, two to the west side, one to the northwest side, one to the north, one to the southwest, one to the south, and one to the southeast.

Current revenues are adequate to cover the cost, Kingery asserted. "For superhighway work during the next ten years the state could collect about $20,000,000; the county $10,000,000; the city $15,000,000, and the park district $10,000,000, a total of $55,000,000."

Basic features recommended for these radial routes followed: Continuous grade separation, elevated or depressed, with physical separation of through traffic from abutting property; broad rights of way, 200 feet to a block in width; a minimum of disturbance of cross streets; restriction of use to passenger vehicles; landscaping and parklike development wherever possible, and points of access at long intervals.

Directed to Develop Details.

The meeting, at the suggestion of the chairman, James E. Bulger, a director of the Chicago Motor club, directed Kingery's committee to develop details of these suggestions. Mayor Kelly commended Kingery's suggestion for coordinating activity in superhighway construction.

"The urgent need for through grade separated highways, not only to the west but to all parts of the city, is apparent," he asserted. "These improvements would benefit the city, county, park district, and state, the recommendation that the cost be equitably allocated between them is logical. We will be glad to cooperate in formulating details of a definite, long range plan and financial program for comprehensive superhighway development for the Chicago metropolitan area."

SON HELD IN ZION ROOM BY PARENTS FOR SEVEN YEARS

Lake county authorities said last night they will start what amounts to mercy litigation today in behalf of a man, suffering from a mental illness, who has been imprisoned in a tiny room for seven years while his parents offered prayers for his recovery. He is Edward McNutt, 33 years old, son of Mr. and Mrs. R. McNutt, elderly truck farmers living at 2206 Elm avenue, Zion. They formerly lived in Nova Scotia.

Investigators found that McNutt was confined in the room with a window heavily screened with wire mesh. He appeared to be emaciated. Mr. and Mrs. McNutt as members of Wilbur Glenn Voliva's Christian Catholic church, believe in divine healing, and have depended upon prayer to cure him, they said. State's Attorney Charles E. Egan today will petition County Judge Perry L. Persons in Waukegan to have young McNutt examined by a medical commission for commitment to a state institution.

Charlie McCarthy hasn't forgotten his home town. Mindful of the fact that it was here he came into the woods, he has induced Edgar Bergen to offer a loving cup for the best performance by an amateur ventriloquist on the Sachs' Amateur hour over WGNR at 5 p. m. Sunday, Feb. 27. There will also be a cash prize for the winner, and runner up will get tickets to the "Goldwyn Follies" movie, which features Charlie.

This amateur hour, one of Chicago's most popular shows, has just been renewed for a year. Sponsor is so far behind in requests for tickets that he is hiring the Civic Opera house auditorium for the show of Sunday, March 13, to catch up, at least in part, with applicants for duets.

U. S. STEEL CORP. PLANS CAPITAL SETUP CHANGES

Proposes Boost in Authorized Stock.

Myron C. Taylor.

New York, Feb. 18.—(P)—Seeking to ease the way for new financing, the United States Steel corporation today proposed changes in its capital structure and charter increasing the authorized common stock from 12,500,000 to 15,000,000 shares, changing this stock from $100 par to no par, and authorizing the issuance of convertible bonds and debentures.

It was emphasized by a company spokesman, however, that no immediate financing was contemplated, and that improvement in market conditions would largely determine when any new issues of stocks, bonds, or debentures would be offered.

The changes, which were formally approved by the finance committee Tuesday after several weeks of discussion within the corporation, were outlined to stockholders by Chairman Myron C. Taylor in a letter dated Feb. 21.

Approved by Directors.

"The board of directors," Taylor said, "believes it is important and in the best interests of the stockholders that the capital structure of the corporation be made more flexible so as to give the board of directors a wider choice in selecting from time to time the method of financing most suitable to the particular occasion."

There are now outstanding 8,703,000 shares of common stock, so the new 15,000,000 authorization would permit nearly doubling the common issue, if that should later appear desirable. The 4,000,000 authorized 1 per cent preferred shares, of which 3,602,811 are outstanding, are not affected by the proposals.

Stockholders will vote on the proposals at the annual meeting April 4.

Carried at $15 a Share.

The new no par common shares would be carried on the company's books at $75 a share, in place of the present $100 a share figure under the plan. The $25 a share difference, amounting to $217,581,300, would then be deducted from the share capital and added to the capital surplus account, swelling it to $298,531,321.

The concern then plans to write off all the intangible assets carried on its books, reducing the item to $1.

This writedown of $298,531,321 would be deducted from the augmented capital surplus account, so that the final result of the series of transactions would be a capital surplus of $38,462,800, about the same as the present figure. Earned surplus would not be affected by the proposals.

Spend $250,000,000.

Taylor pointed out to the stockholders that in the five year period ended Dec. 31 last the corporation and its subsidiaries spent approximately $250,000,000 for rehabilitation and construction, providing $225,000,000 of this amount from their own resources without the issue or sale of securities. With about $80,000,000 still to be spent in this work, Taylor further pointed out that the corporation on Feb. 1 borrowed $50,000,000 from New York, Chicago, and Pittsburgh banks, in one, two, and three year loans, to avoid impairing working assets.

Some Wall street quarters thought desire to refund these bank loans into longer term issues was at least one of the reasons behind today's proposed capital changes.

J. EDWARD JONES OIL BANKRUPTCY CASE DISMISSED

New York, Feb. 18.—(Special.)—One of the shortest proceedings under section 77B of the national bankruptcy act terminated today in the federal court when Judge John C. Knox dismissed the petition of the J. Edward Jones Petroleum corporation, which was filed on Dec. 30, 1937.

Judge Knox was informed that creditors holding claims approximately $249,000 had accepted the proposal of the Potter Brilling company of Texas, the chief creditor, with a claim for $192,000, to operate the Jones properties in the Redsea, i. e., oil field, under an agreement to pay all claims out of revenues before turning the properties back to the Jones corporation.

It was disclosed by Hyman I. Fischbach, attorney for the debtor, that the tornado this morning which killed about twenty persons in the vicinity, had struck the heart of the Jones properties and that several employees were reported missing. Whatever property damage resulted from the tornado is fully covered by insurance, the attorney said.

U. S. Pays 0.092 Average Rate on Treasury Bills

Subscriptions totaling $141,485,000 were received for the $50,000,000 issue of 91 day treasury bills offered last Wednesday. Secretary of Treasury Morgenthau said last night in Washington, D. C. The average price on bids accepted was 99.977, representing a return on an annual basis of 0.092 per cent.

Stocks Slump on Roosevelt's Price Remarks

(Chicago Tribune Press Service.)

New York, Feb. 18.—Stocks dropped fractions to around 2 points today as fresh weakness appeared in the wake of President Roosevelt's remarks on the commodity price structure. Trading was less active than on Thursday, some 768,000 shares changing hands today, compared with 856,000 shares yesterday.

The proposed change in the capital structure of the United States Steel corporation and a chilling of inflationary sentiment were regarded as contributing factors to the decline. Prices dropped all along the line. Stocks which made the sharpest advances yesterday were among the leading losers today. In this category were "raw material" shares, such as steels, metals, rubbers and those stocks allied with farm prosperity.

Market Rises at Start.

At the outset of trading the market moved forward abruptly, apparently in continuation of yesterday's improvement. Gains of fractions to around 3 points were made, some of them on large blocks. After the early demand had subsided activity and interest dwindled and prices slipped from their early tops. Brokers attributed the halt to the desire of traders to await the President's remarks.

Immediately on learning the President's opinions, traders displayed uncertainty, but the realization that his remarks did not portend much change in commodity prices made for selling, and prices began to tumble. Adding to the pressure was the knowledge of several long accounts taken on yesterday in anticipation of more favorable developments.

Dampening of Inflation Enthusiasm.

The dampening of inflation enthusiasm came as a result of the President's statement that there would be no further devaluation of the dollar. The losses were not unduly severe, however, until the U. S. Steel corporation's announcement came in the final hour, bringing out further liquidation, and toward the close, prices again began to move higher.

U. S. Steel sold off sharply to 52 1/2, following the announcement, then worked higher to close at 53 1/4 for a net loss of 1 1/2 points. Bethlehem also was in generous supply and declined fractionally as also did Republic, Youngstown, and Crucible Steel.

U. S. Rubber again was the most active issue of the day and declined 3/4 of a point. Other rubbers lost smaller amounts.

Coppers Fractionally Lower.

Losses in the coppers were mostly fractional, with Anaconda and International Nickel active.

Rails were heavy throughout the session, an unfavorable carloading report further depressing the list.

Most power and light shares lost minor fractions.

American Telephone and Telegraph dropped 1 1/4, but Radio and Western Union were steady.

Fractional declines predominated in the aviation and oil groups.

Motors also were quiet active on the down side, Chrysler and General Motors dropping large fractions.

Johns Manville was a big loser in the building shares, slumping 4 points. Other losses were fractional. Gold mining stocks closed unchanged to small fractions lower.

REPORT CHRYSLER SALE OF CREDIT CONCERN SHARES

New York, Feb. 18.—(Special.)—One of the largest distributions of privately acquired blocks of stock recorded recently was carried out today when an investment banking group headed by Kidder, Peabody, & Co. sold 53,000 shares of Commercial Credit corporation common stock. The bankers declined to state from whom the stock was purchased, but in reliable quarters it was learned that it came out of the Chrysler corporation's portfolio.

Before the stock market opened the Commercial Credit stock was offered through the bankers and dealers at 36, which compared with a closing price of 36 1/2 on the New York Stock exchange yesterday. After the market officially opened the price of the Chrysler block of Commercial Credit was adjusted to the ruling price on the exchange.

The Chrysler corporation, in common with the General Motors corporation and the Ford Motor company, was the subject of an investigation by a grand jury in Milwaukee late last year, which sought to establish that the interest of the motor companies in the Chrysler corporation was a fair relations between them. The grand jury was dismissed, but on Jan. 25 the subject was revived when the United States attorney general asked a Milwaukee federal judge to impound the records of three companies pending an inquiry.

O'NEIL ASSAILS PROPAGANDA OF PUBLIC OFFICIALS

New York, Feb. 18.—(Special.)—Declaring that papers today are loaded with untruths by public officials, William F. O'Neil, president of the General Tire and Rubber company, today urged advertising men to "use your influence to put across the real story of business."

Addressing the Advertising Club of New York, O'Neil said the newspapers give too much space to news detrimental to business, "shot out by people who don't know what they're talking about."

O'Neil criticized statements by Secretary of Labor Perkins that automatic machinery has thrown people out of work. He asserted that 50 per cent of all people gainfully employed today are working because of automatic machinery. He also said that eight times as many people are concerned with the sale and merchandising of a product as are engaged in manufacturing.

U. S. COAL PRICE BOARD SPLITS ON PATRONAGE

Row Over 1,335 Fat Jobs Created.

BY WILLARD EDWARDS.

(Chicago Tribune Press Service.)

Washington, D. C., Feb. 18.—(Special.)—The national bituminous coal commission was scarcely five months old when it attained distinction as a jobholders' paradise. The seven $10,000 a year commissioners were at one another's throats in a struggle for 1,335 fat jobs and even President Roosevelt could not quiet the unholy row.

When the bituminous coal act became law on April 26, 1937, political Washington, of course, was not unaware that a good sized organization thereby was created, but the magnitude of the patronage involved was not appreciated immediately.

Find Politics Governors.

Politics governed the selection of the seven commissioners, as has been told. They were confirmed by the senate in May without a voice being raised to question their qualifications. The seven sat down on May 17 and their eyes brightened as they read the coal act.

The simple, all-embracing language, the act provided: "The commission is authorized to appoint and fix the compensation and duties of a secretary and necessary professional, clerical and other assistants."

The act also provided that the coal-producing areas of the country should be divided into 23 separate districts. In each district, there was to be selected a district board of producers with a labor member. These boards were to act in an advisory capacity to the commission and the members served without compensation.

Bureaus Obtain Data.

In addition, each district, under the act, was to have a "statistical bureau" to obtain data on the coal industry. These bureaus were to act as agencies of the commission. The act also provided that these bureaus were not to be limited in the act.

The set-up was ideal from a patronage standpoint. When Senator Joseph F. Guffey (D., Pa.), author of the act, realized the possibilities, he quietly moved to obtain control of the situation.

Senator Guffey organized a majority of four on the board. This consisted of his personal appointee, Chairman Charles F. Hostford Jr. of Pittsburgh, and Commissioner Walter H. Maloney, protégé of the Prendergast machine of Kansas City, Mo.; C. E. Smith of Virginia, and Thomas S. Haymond of Kentucky.

This majority took over the task of distributing patronage. Left out pretty much in the cold were the remaining three commissioners, Elias E. Greenlee of Indiana, John C. Lewis of Iowa, and Percy Tietlow of Ohio, the latter two protégés of C. I. O. boss John L. Lewis.

The Guffey-Prendergast faction took over the "organization" of thirteen states, including Pennsylvania, West Virginia, and Kentucky, where conditions were declared to necessitate the most jobs. The five states of Illinois, Iowa, Indiana, Michigan, and Ohio were "organized" by the minority of three, but even here, some of the fattest jobs were grabbed off by the majority.

Eventually, according to budget records, 1,335 jobs were created and parceled out for the fiscal year ending June 30. In the next fiscal year, 1,320 jobs are contemplated, according to the same records.

The commission spent an estimated $3,600,000 in its first year of operation and is asking for $3,000,000 in the next fiscal year.

Self-Support Is Board's Goal.

It is the contention of the commission that it eventually will be self-supporting through the excise tax at 1 per cent per ton of coal imposed under the act. This is in addition to the 19 per cent penalty tax imposed on producers who do not obey the commission's regulations.

The coal commission salary list was considered an exceedingly pleasing one by Washington standards. A government job is considered most attractive from a patronage standpoint when it rises to the $4,600 level. There were 100 such jobs, ranging from $4,600 to $8,000, listed in the present year's records. A majority of the remaining jobs are in the $2,500 and $3,000 class.

The complaints from the minority grew so loud that word of the stormy sessions behind locked doors began to spread through the capital. In August a White House emissary sat

MORE LARGE STEEL COMPANIES EXTEND PRESENT PRICE LEVEL

Current prices for steel products were extended through the second quarter of the year yesterday by several major companies following the first announcement made Thursday by Carnegie-Illinois Steel corporation, subsidiary of United States Steel corporation. Companies joining in the announcement yesterday were Inland, Bethlehem, and Youngstown.

The American Steel and Wire company, a United States Steel unit, announced a reduction of $2 a ton on cold rolled strip to correspond with the recent cut by other companies of $4 a ton on cold rolled sheet. Other base prices on rods, wire, and wire products were reaffirmed by American Steel and Wire.

Grains Decline After Meeting of President

CHICAGO GRAIN FUTURES

Closing prices on the May delivery of principal grains on the Chicago Board of Trade yesterday:

Grain	Yesterday	Thursday	Year ago
Wheat	80.00	80.00	81.36
Barley	50.00	50.00	51.00
Oats	31.00	31.00	31.00
Rye	74.00	74.00	74.00
Hay	1.00	1.00	1.00

Wheat prices declined 2 1/2 cents and corn 1 1/4 cents a bushel from the early high point yesterday after remarks by President Roosevelt at his press conference at Washington that the administration's policy of rectifying alleged disparity between commodity prices and manufactured goods did not involve inflation or further devaluation of the dollar.

May wheat, which sold at 94 1/4 cents a bushel before the press conference, dropped to 92 cents shortly after the statement was given out. Many operators who had bought recently on inflation reports sold out their long positions. Closing trades were within a fraction of a cent of the bottom. Wheat was 1 1/4 to 1 1/2 cents lower and corn 1 1/4 to 1 1/2 cents lower.

Speculative Interest Small.

Speculative interest in the grain markets yesterday was relatively small, except during the brief period which followed the announcement regarding the administration's policy. Declines in securities and in the commodity markets in general were a factor in helping along the setback in grains.

May wheat sold yesterday within a small fraction of a cent a bushel of the lowest level on the current season, and sentiment at the close was generally inclined to favor the bear side of the market, due largely to the highly beneficial moisture for the new southwestern winter wheat crop in the last few days.

Corn Shows More Resistance.

Corn showed somewhat more resistance to selling pressure than wheat due to the development of a fair export demand, sales in all positions being estimated at 500,000 bushels. Country offerings for deferred shipment were smaller than earlier in the week. Unfavorable weather conditions are expected to delay the movement to some extent. Country trade was said yesterday to be in poor condition.

Lard futures closed 7 1/2 to 12 1/2 cents per 100 pounds higher, due largely to an advance in cotton seed oil to a new high for the season. Lard declined 20 cents from the early high point at one time, but rallied later.

URGE TRADE PACT WITH BRITAIN END DUTY ON U. S. CORN

The Chicago Board of Trade yesterday filed a brief in Washington, D. C., with the committee for reciprocity urging that American representatives negotiating tariff agreements with Great Britain seek a removal of the duty now levied on American white corn. The brief also proposed that the removal of the Canadian duty on all types of American corn should be sought.

Great Britain now levies a 10 per cent ad valorem duty on American white corn and admits yellow corn at mixed corn duty free.

RAIL OPERATING INCOME SLUMPS AS 1937 ENDS

Net railway operating income of 144 class 1 railroads in December, 1937, declined to $25,971,526, compared with $70,958,538 in December, 1936, the bureau of statistics of the Interstate commerce commission reported yesterday. For the year 1937 the same roads had net operating income of $890,180,565, against $967,174,165 in 1936.

The Kansas City Southern railway yesterday reported January net operating income of $54,875, against $191,663 in January, 1936. Gross revenues for the month were $1,126,410, compared with $1,187,470 in the like month last year.

UNITED LIGHT AND POWER REGISTERS UNDER UTILITY ACT

The United Light and Power company, Chicago, a $750,540,000 utility corporation whose 64 subsidiaries are spread over thirteen states, yesterday registered with the securities and exchange commission under the holding company act, according to William O. Douglas, commission chairman.

Registration of the company increased to $5,775,000,000 the total of utility assets registered under the act. This total represents approximately 37 per cent of the aggregate assets of the utility industry subject to the act, Douglas declared.

Charles McCain, United Light and Power president, conferred with Douglas and members of the commission early yesterday. At the conclusion of the meeting, the registration was announced.

The United Light and Railways company and the Continental Gas and Electric corporation, both subsidiaries of United Light and Power, also registered. The American Light and Traction company, another subsidiary, registered a year ago.

Saying the registration of the holding company was "an important contribution toward progress in the utility industry, Douglas commended the corporation for "choosing the course of cooperation."

CHARGE CAGO CO. FORMED TO AVOID BANK STOCK LEVY

New York, Feb. 18.—(Special.)—Some stockholders of the Chicago joint stock land bank formed Cago corporation so they might avoid a levy on their shares by the Federal Reserve bank's receivership, bondholder creditors alleged today as trial was resumed before Federal Judge John M. Woolsey in federal court.

Bondholder creditors of the Chicago joint stock land bank seek to compel a 100 per cent deficiency assessment against New York state holders of $1,500,000 of the bank's capital stock. The bank was petitioned into receivership in October, 1932.

Chief target in the New York action is Cago corporation, holder of record of 7,939 shares of stock in the bank, subject to assessment of $100 each. Complaining bondholders hold that Paul Fox, president of Cago corporation; George A. Spiegelberg, Doris Goldstand, and Frieda Berg, directors, are merely acting as dummies for the principals who formed the corporation.

Frank Carter of Westwood, N. J., broker, testified today when he resigned from the firm of Gerder, Devlet & Co. in 1931 he received 356 shares of the Chicago bank stock for his interest.

When he received them he said, the certificates were in the name of Selma Devlet, mother of Michael J. Devlet, a son of the firm. Paul Fox asked him to return the certificates so they could be transferred from the name of Selma Devlet to a corporation.

CLEAR WAY FOR CLEVELAND BANK TO PAY $38,000,000

Cleveland, O., Feb. 18.—(P)—Common Pleas Judge Samuel E. Kramer brokered the reorganization plan for the liquidating Union Trust company today and cleared the way for establishment of the new Union Bank of Commerce and payment of $38,000,000 in dividends to depositors of the Union Trust company. The court's ruling was expected to result in opening the bank by April 15.

Liquidator Oscar L. Cox reported today that more than 92 per cent of depositors and stockholders favored establishment of the new bank rather than liquidation of frozen assets.

The new bank will begin business with capital of $4,000,000 in common stock and $1,000,000 in preferred stock and with a surplus of $2,000,000 and undivided profits of $1,000,000. It will have no liquidating function, but retaining assets of the old Union Trust company will be liquidated by Union Properties, Inc., a wholly owned subsidiary.

Strike Saturated Oil Sand in Backyard at Centralia

Centralia, Ill., Feb. 18.—(P)—Centralia was assured of its first oil well in the city today when John Pugh, independent operator, announced his first oil in the backyard of the Emmett C. Copple home in the west end of town had struck a saturated oil sand.

Big Concerns' Profits Vary Widely in '37

Earnings reports issued yesterday showed mixed results. Lower profits for 1937, compared with 1936, were reported by the Quaker Oats company, National Biscuit company, and Harbison-Walker Refractories company. Higher income for 1937 was reported by the American Light and Traction company, Underwood-Elliott-Fisher company, and Lone Star Cement corporation.

The audited report of the Quaker Oats company and subsidiary yesterday showed net income of $4,167,047, equal after preferred dividends to $4,400 a common share, compared with net income in 1936 of $5,733,556, or $6.63 a common share. The company issues no interim reports.

Orders Shrink Late in Year.

John Stuart, president, said in a statement to stockholders that the company between July and October incurred a drop in orders that wiped out gains in packaged product sales made earlier in the year. He said new sales were curtailed during the period because of inventory liquidation by wholesale and retail grocers.

"Our total production of all cereals," said Stuart, "measured in barrels for the year in the United States and Canada was less than in 1936. This reduced our earnings because with less production our cost per barrel or per unit is higher."

"For 1937 our tax charges total $1,434,000. Of this amount, $752,000 represents taxes other than income taxes, which is an increase of $173,000 over 1936. It now requires the time of about 20 people to prepare the records and make the reports required by state and federal government regulations. This cost is largely new."

National Biscuit Earns Less.

National Biscuit company had net income in 1937 of $1,835,111, or $1.51 a common share, against $2,640,077, or $1.73 a share, in 1936. Indicated net income for the December quarter amounted to $3,162,580, compared with $3,309,739 in the September quarter and $2,975,565 in the fourth quarter of 1936.

The company announced that the decrease in net income for the year was due chiefly to increased costs of raw materials, together with increased expense resulting from social security taxes.

Indicated net income for the Harbison-Walker Refractories company in the quarter ended Dec. 31 amounted to only $336,295, compared with $1,028,318 in the corresponding 1936 quarter. For the year 1937 net was $3,131,595, or $2.17 a common share, against $3,462,483, or $2.41 a share, in 1936.

Am. Chain-Cable Earnings.

American Chain and Cable company showed net profit for last year of $3,042,075, or $2.79 a common share on 987,436 shares, against 1936 profit of $2,967,789, or $2.95 a share on 250,517 shares, in the preceding year. The stock was split three for one in 1937. Indicated net income for the last half of the year was $1,121,828, against $1,746,454 in the second half of 1936.

Abbott Laboratories showed in 1937 the best results in the history of the company in both earnings and sales. Net income amounted to $1,612,360, or $2.51 a common share, against $1,336,115 in the corresponding 1936 quarter. Sales totaled $9,509,911, an increase of 22 per cent over 1936. Indicated net profit in the December quarter, however, fell to $284,780, compared with $462,244 in the preceding quarter.

Underwood-Elliott-Fisher.

Underwood-Elliott-Fisher company showed net profit for last year of $4,913,363, or $4.70 a common share, against $3,838,704, or $3.05 a share, in the preceding year. Indicated net income for the final quarter and with a surplus of $2,000,000 and undivided profits of $1,000,000. It will have no liquidating function, but retaining assets of the old Union Trust company will be liquidated by Union Properties, Inc., a wholly owned subsidiary.

Commodities Decline After Roosevelt Talk

Heavy liquidation in most commodity contracts after President Roosevelt's message on prices sent futures quotations sharply lower, after gains had been recorded in the first hour, before the President's remarks had been made. The President's statement that a policy of balanced prices did not mean inflation appeared to cause substantial realizing by traders. The Dow-Jones index of commodity futures prices, which had advanced at the end of the first hour 0.22 over the preceding close, fell steadily, closing at 54.03, off 0.61.

Wholesale cash staple prices, however, held steady. The Associated Press index of 35 staples stood at 70.97, compared with 70.96 on Thursday.

Hide Trading Active.

Futures trading in hides and wool tops was the largest in the history of the commodity exchange. Sales of hide futures totaled 192,800,000 pounds, topping the record of 18,000,000 pounds set Thursday. Hide quotations fell 0.20 to 0.34 cent a pound, with the March contract quoted at 9.01 cents. A sharp early advance in wool top futures was only partly offset by later decline, which left closing quotations 0.15 to 0.25 cent above preceding closes. Trading totaled 1,450,000 pounds.

In the metal markets, the price of spot copper was backed to 10.17 cents a pound, against 10 cents on the preceding day. The jump lifted the foreign prices to a premium over the domestic quotation for the first time this year. Domestic copper was steady at 10 cents. In the futures trading, copper contracts closed 0.06 to 0.10 cent lower. Lead advanced 0.04 to 0.07 cent, and tin contracts were 0.50 cent higher. Zinc futures held unchanged.

Cocoa and Coffee Lower.

Cocoa and coffee contracts moved lower, and raw sugar futures were uneven within a narrow range. Cocoa quotations dipped 0.20 to 0.26 cent on sales of 12,140 tons. Santos coffee dropped 0.05 to 0.03 cent and Rio was down 0.07 to unchanged. Domestic sugar was unchanged to 0.01 cent lower, and world contracts finished unchanged to 0.01 cent higher.

Cottonseed oil contracts, after early advances of from 0.10 to 0.12 cent, closed 0.02 cent higher to 0.03 cent lower. Rubber futures were down 0.04 to 0.12 cent, and silk contracts moved irregularly, closing 1/4 cent higher to 2 cents lower.

DOLLAR FIRMER AS DEVALUATION FEAR IS ALLAYED

The American dollar strengthened in the foreign exchange market yesterday after President Roosevelt's statement that the administration is not contemplating further dollar devaluation. Most foreign currencies had risen in relation to the dollar before the President's statement was made at his morning press conference, but later reversed their trend.

The British pound fell 1/2 cent, closing at $0.5225, and the French franc dropped 0.00625 cent to 3.28625 cents. Belgian, Swiss, and Netherlands currencies recorded corresponding losses.

The rumors of dollar devaluation have been circulating for months. They had been previously denied by the President and Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau. They were given new life this week when the treasury announced modification of its gold sterilization policy.

The department of commerce reported $131,553 of gold imports in the week ended Feb. 11, of which $2,102,318 came from Colombia. Silver imports totaled $1,877,330, virtually all of which came from Mexico.

DIESEL ENGINES WILL BE RENTED BY ROCK ISLAND

Federal Judge James H. Wilkerson yesterday authorized the trustees of the Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific railway company to rent ten Diesel switching locomotives for seven years from the Electro-Motive corporation at an approximate total cost of $716,000, plus 4 per cent interest on the unpaid balance. The rental will be paid in equal monthly installments.

The road is to pay a total of $67,500, or $804 a month, for each of eight 100 ton locomotives, and $88,000, or $1,048 a month, for each of two 125 ton locomotives, plus 4 per cent on the unpaid amount. After seven years the Rock Island has the option of buying the engines at $1 each.

HOLC HAS 1,625 HOMES FOR SALE IN ILLINOIS; RESULT OF DEFAULTS

Uncle Sam, as Home Owners' Loan corporation landlord for Illinois properties, had 1,625 houses on his hands yesterday which he had acquired through foreclosure or voluntary conveyances.

Out of 70,024 loans made in this state by the HOLC, 6,850 have defaulted. The government already has acquired title to 2,250 properties and is now trying to get possession of the remaining 4,600 through foreclosure proceedings.

FLORA W. LASKER ESTATE SEEKING REVIEW OF TAXES

Executors of the estate of the late Flora W. Lasker of Chicago yesterday asked the board of tax appeals in Washington to review an assessment of $261,769 for income taxes made against the estate by the Internal revenue department.

The assessment was based on alleged deficiencies claimed by the treasury for the years 1929, 1930, and 1931. The government refused to allow losses on the sale of securities which the executors contended were deductible.

Mrs. Lasker died Dec. 19, 1935, leaving an estate of an estimated net value of $1,350,237.

REZONING URGED TO CLEAR AWAY BLIGHTED AREAS

Experts Advise City at Housing Congress.

Rezoning ordinances and a revised building code will clear the way for elimination of Chicago's blighted housing areas, experts said yesterday at the city council housing congress in the city hall. Mayor Kelly has pledged his support to a program of areas to rehabilitate the blighted areas.

F. J. Thielbar, chairman of a commission that is revising the building code, said seven chapters of the new code have been passed by the council and now are part of the building ordinances. As a result, he said, the new and more economical use of materials is possible.

Asked whether the revised code will make substantial economic possible in building homes in the $5,000 class he said savings and benefits are scattered through the entire code. He pointed out that under the present zoning restrictions little area is left in Chicago where low cost housing is possible.

"We have hundreds of acres of vacant properties, and a revision of the zoning ordinance to permit the use of this land for low cost dwellings would seem to be in order," he said.

Richard Smykal, president of the Home Builders' company, urged that the officials give prompt attention to recommendations for changes in the building code. He also urged that rezoning ordinances be necessary to permit the use for residential purposes of present industrial areas.

Blames Narrow Lot Lines. "Fundamental causes of blighted areas are narrow lot lines," said Victor H. Stromquist, an architect. "A slum house either is built to the side of the lot or within a foot of the neighboring wall."

Other speakers included Richard E. Schmidt, building commissioner of Chicago; Robert Knight, deputy building commissioner; J. Soule Watterfield, real estate dealer; and R. B. Mitchell of the University of Chicago. Ald. William A. Rowan (10th) chairman of the council's housing committee, presided. The sessions, which are open to the public, will continue through next Friday.

TAX EXEMPTION OF FIRMS OUTSIDE COUNTY DEFINED

In an opinion reflecting $3,000,000 to $4,000,000 in personal property assessments, franchises of foreign corporations in Cook county, the state's attorney's office yesterday informed the board of tax appeals that the franchises of such corporations cannot be taxed.

Assessments of numerous holding companies and corporations having nominal but legal offices in other states have been protested before Emmet Wheelan, Paul Drymalski, members of the board of tax appeals. Decisions of the board on these complaints had awaited the state's attorney's opinion rendered yesterday.
